BIGGEST-EVER U.S. N-TEST

5-Megaton Blast Set for Amchitka

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) — A nuclear weapon with an explosive force of five million tons of TNT will be exploded by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission below Alaska's Amchitka Island in early October.

Code-named Cannikin, the five-megaton test will be the largest underground atomic test ever conducted by the United States and will release almost five times the amount of explosive energy let loose by the largest previous underground U.S. test.

The AEC will not confirm the size or time of the test, declaring only that Cannikin will be "larger in yield" than the last Amchitka test called Milrow on Oct. 2, 1969, and will be held "in the fall of 1971."

"Cannikin is scheduled for October, because the Alaskan weather is most reliable then," an informed source said. "Its expected yield is very close to five megatons, so close you might as well call it five megatons."

While the AEC will not comment on the purpose of Cannikin, it is understood that it will be a test of an enlarged warhead for the spartan ABM missile. This is the long-range (more than 400 miles) version of the ABM, whose warhead is built to destroy incoming missiles in the upper reaches of the atmosphere or above the atmosphere.

★ ★ ★

Whatever its purpose, Cannikin is likely to arouse at least as much protest as the Milrow test kicked up almost two years ago.

Milrow as a 1.2-megaton test, described at the time it went off as a "suitability" test to see if still largest tests could be safely carried out under the tundra and hard rock of Amchitka island.

Besides Sen. Mike Gravel (D., Alaska) and antiwar and environmental groups, the countries of Canada and Japan denounced Milrow in strong terms. Japan called it a threat to Japanese fishing operations, and Canada expressed "concern . . . about possible damage or injury for Canada resulting from these tests."

Milrow caused no damage, but Cannikin's five-megaton size is certain to revive fears about its triggering secondary earthquakes and submarine tidal waves, the two biggest concerns of the critics.

Sen. Gravel has already consulted with Alaska's Democratic Gov. William A. Egan about how to protest Cannikin, and two weeks ago the Canadian embassy in Washington made public a note it passed to the state department Feb. 19.

The note conveyed the "serious concern of the Canadian government about further underground testing on Amchitka," noting in particular that Amchitka tests, "take place in a region known to be prone to earth disturbances.

Scientists say that a five-megaton test will explode with a force equal to an earthquake of magnitude 7.0 on the Richter scale, which the AEC claims is not large enough to trigger a serious secondary earthquake.

One source said that AEC studies indicate it can safely test atomic weapons with yields of 20 to 25 megatons on the island. He said that it would take an explosion of greater than 25 megatons to trigger an earthquake of worrisome size.

★ ★ ★

Testing critics also worry about radiation contaminating underground water supplies or leaking into the Pacific Ocean, but an AEC source claims that tests over one megaton create so much heat that they cauterize the nuclear cavity and seal in the radiation.

While the largest U.S. underground tests have been in the 1.2 4-1 megaton range, the Soviet Union has conducted one test equal to five megatons and a second of six megatons. Both of these Soviet tests were on Novaya Zemlya Island, in the Arctic Ocean.

Pakistan Rebellion Crumbling

CHUADANGA, East Pakistan (AP) — Armed resistance in much of rebellious East Pakistan is crumbling fast before the swiftly advancing columns of President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan's army from West Pakistan.

The Pakistani army has been heavily reinforced from the country's western wing and is rapidly fanning out from Dacca in all directions.

For miles around the provincial capital the army is in firm control. Pakistan's green-and white national flag flies from every second village hut.

EXPECT REPRISALS

The people are afraid of informers and terrified of reprisals should they be identified as supporters of Bangla Desh, the Bengali nation proclaimed by Sheik Mujib.

Thousands have fled the capital but Dacca nevertheless is slowly returning to something like normal.

"We are functioning at gunpoint, we have no alternative," said one Bengali civil servant.

Crossing the wide Ganges River unopposed, the Pakistani army has occupied the city of Pabna. Troops were reported swinging southwest toward the Bangla Desh stronghold of Kushtia.

Something close to panic seized its rag-tag band of defenders, and there was a wild rush to flee the town. A fleet of trucks, immobilized by lack of gasoline, was left to the advancing enemy. No effort was made to destroy them.

It was in Kushtia that some 200 Pakistan troops were massacred by Bangla Desh partisians, and the town fears bloody reprisal is inevitable.

Prices Climb 1.9% in Year

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The consumer price index rose four-tenths of an index point last month to 131.3, with higher prices for food, clothing and housing, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

In percentage terms the index last month was 1.9 per cent above a year earlier, barely under the two per cent annual increase considered by economists to be the maximum non-inflationary gain in Canada.

The index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, was 130.9 in February and 128.9 in March last year.

All major components of the index rose last month, except the tobacco and alcohol index.

Clothing prices recorded the largest advance. The bureau attributed the increase to a return to regular prices after winter sales.

FOOD PRICES RISE

While food prices rose by half of one per cent in the month, food prices were still below the level of a year ago.

The housing index rose only fractionally during the month, but it was 4.3 per cent higher than in March last year, the biggest increase of any of the group indexes over a 12-month period.

But the 1.9-per-cent gain indicates some acceleration in the price rise. In December, when the all-items index dropped, the annual rate was 1.5 per cent. It rose to 1.6 per cent in January and 1.7 per cent in February.

The bureau said the purchasing power of the 1961 consumer dollar was 76 cents in March this year, compared with 78 cents in March last

YOUNG HOCKEY PLAYER KILLED BY PUCK

CLAUDIO
below the helmet

TORONTO (CP) — A 16-year-old boy was killed Monday when his hockey helmet failed to protect him from a flying puck that hit the side of his head.

Claudio Romanin collapsed on the ice during a warmup for a casual game. He was pronounced dead at hospital.

Mida Roncali, a cousin of Romanin said:

"I was told the puck hit him on the side of the head a fraction below the helmet. An inch higher and he might have been all right."

The boy was just turning behind the goal when a slapshot fired by another boy caught him on the temple. Coroner Dr. A. E. Noble said he believed Romanin died of a massive brain hemorrhage.

Jobless Teachers' Group To Fight for More Work

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's unemployed teachers are organizing to fight for better job opportunities.

The Teachers Unemployment Association, a week-old organization started by Lower Mainland teachers, appeared at opening sessions of the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual convention here Monday to appeal for support.

The group, told it would have a chance to present its case at an unspecified time during the four-day convention, spent the day handing out leaflets which said the federation has never admitted there is a teacher unemployment problem.

"It has done nothing to fight for future reduction instead of a future increase in teacher unemployment," the leaflet said.

Spokesman Beth Maris estimated the number of unemployed teachers in B.C at about 1,000.

LIST COMPILED

Last December the federation compiled a list of 388 jobless teachers after running newspaper advertisements which asked unemployed teachers to contact the federation. Of these, 181 said they were willing to teach anywhere, and 288 had one or more degrees.

Canada Appoints China Ambassador

OTTAWA (CP)—Ralph E. Collins, an assistant external affairs undersecretary, today was named Canada's first ambassador to the People's Republic of China.

At the same time it was announced that Huang Hua, former Chinese ambassador to the United Arab Republic, will be mainland China's first ambassador to Ottawa.

Both postings had been predicted earlier.

Laotian Debacle Prompts Shuffle

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. officials are reassessing the Vietnamization program because of the disappointing South Vietnamese performance in the Laotian invasion and the current North Vietnamese offensive in the central highlands.

It was learned today the U.S. 7th Air Force is planning a complete reorganization and consolidation of its squadrons in South Vietnam in an effort to become more proficient in providing cover for withdrawing American forces.

During withdrawal of 100,000 more troops between May 1 and Dec. 1, reduction of the 40,500 air force personnel will likely be kept to a minimum, sources said, with perhaps only one air wing pulled out.

Both the Laotian operation and the current North Vietnamese offensive in the central highlands point up one major weakness of Vietnamization. This is the South Vietnamese dependency on American air power. The South Vietnamese air force does not have enough planes or firepower yet to do the job alone, U.S. officials say.

Meets Cross

LONDON (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec had what aides called a "very warm" meeting today with James Cross, the first time the two men have gotten together since the British official was released from captivity last December by Front de Liberation du Quebec kidnappers in Montreal.

India Ships on Guard Near Colombo Harbor

COLOMBO (CP) — At least four Indian warships lay outside Colombo harbor today as the Ceylonese began observance of the Buddhist new year and captured documents told of plans by the Che Guevarist rebels to attack Colombo.

A stringent nightly curfew is in effect following more than a week of violence between the insurgents estimated to number 80,000 and 25,000 troops and police.

Informed sources said military authorities had seized documents of the Marxist rebels outlining plans for an attack today or Wednesday on Colombo. The documents were said to be several days old, however, and it was not known whether the rebels would still come out from hiding for the planned assault.

A fleet of armed helicopters took off from Colombo today to root out insurgents in jungle areas.

An armed forces spokesman claimed that large bands of terrorists were deserting and abandoning weapons and uniforms in various parts of the island.

CALGARY CIVIC PROBE BLAMES MAYOR

Officials 'Embarrass' City Police

CALGARY (CP) — Civic officials were accused of embarrassing and making fools of city police Monday in the report of a public inquiry into municipal affairs.

Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow said Mayor Rod Sykes was at fault for disharmony and a lack of communication with police over law enforcement policies to be used at a rock festival last summer.

The disagreement led to the embarrassment of police who could not take action against open abuse of drug and liquor laws.

The report said Ald. John Kushner made fools of the police when he entered a float in the Calgary Stampede last year concerning allegations against him for unlawfully removing an apple tree from city property.

Ald. Kushner, who had the tree dug up with city equipment and moved under police escort, acted "to say the least, indiscreet," said Mr. Justice Morrow.

SON'S YARD

The tree had been placed in the yard of the alderman's son.

The Northwest Territories justice said he was satisfied project manager Ed Burgoyne of the housing and urban renewal department did not give Ald. Kushner permission to remove the tree, but that Ald. Kushner believed he had permission and acted innocently.

SYKES
mayor blamed

The float in the Stampede parade had carried a tree — but not the one removed from an urban renewal area. The presence of the float drew a chuckle from those Calgarians who regarded the incident as comical.

Profile of Sykes —See Page 35

In discussing thefts from the city, Mr. Justice Morrow said there was a "general apathy about security matters and about improving or tightening them."

IMPROVED SECURITY

In his 156-page report, Mr. Justice Morrow recommended improved security and surveillance in areas where money was handled.

The inquiry, which was prompted after two men were convicted last year of theft from the Calgary transit system, was requested by Mayor Sykes to bring out the truth and eliminate false rumors concerning theft from the city.

NHL Brawl Costs $16,550

MONTREAL (UPI) — National Hockey League President Clarence Campbell today imposed record team penalties of $5,000 each to the New York Rangers and the Toronto Maple Leafs and handed out an additional total of $6,550 to individual players of the two teams.

The fines grew out of a Stanley Cup brawl on April 8 at Madison Square Garden.

In assessing the fines, Campbell described the Garden brawl as "one of the most derogatory spectacles which the league has produced in recent years."

Campbell noted that the NHL governors had increased penalties for bench clearing incidents two years ago and for a time "this remedied the situation to some degree."

The heaviest fines of $450 each went to Brad Park of the Rangers and Darryl Sittler of the Leafs.

Mike Pelyk of the Leafs was fined $400 for leaving his players' bench, thus precipitating the general bench clearing of both teams.

Rangers goalie Ed Giacomin was also fined $400 for leaving his goal crease twice.

A total of 14 Leaf players shared $3,500 in individual fines.

Fourteen Ranger players were hit was a total of $3,300.

No Disaster Declaration For Regina

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher said today he will not declare flooded residential districts in Regina disaster areas.

Thatcher said outside the legislature that the province has said it is willing to provide financial help and there is no need to declare a disaster.

Mayor Harry Walker asked for the declaration in a letter to the premier this morning.

Flooding which isolated 180 homes was expected to peak today but a new, possibly more serious threat, was developing just outside the city.

Heavy flooding was forecast for the small farming community of Lumsden, 18 miles northwest of here. About 200 soldiers from the Canadian Armed Forces base at Shilo, Man., were being flown here to help the 875 residents of the twon reinforce dikes.

Monday, while an estimated 500 volunteers, police officers and armed forces personnel fought flood waters in Regina, 20,000 sandbags were delivered to Lumsden. Another 70,000 were to follow.

WALKIE TALKIES STOLEN

City police are investigating a break-in over the long weekend into a construction trailer at the building site beside the Victoria Press Ltd. building, 2631 Douglas.

An officer said culprits stole two walkie-talkie units, some locks and keys and a protractor from the trailer sometime between April 8 and Monday morning.

He said entry was gained through a ventilation opening, 12 inches square, on the roof of the trailer owned by Farmer Construction Ltd.

Consumer Laws Start July 1

The provincial government has set July 1 as the proclamation date for amendments to the Consumer Protection Act which ensures that the guarantees in sale contracts remain in force after the contracts are assigned.

The controversial Air Space Titles Act, will allow space above private property to be registered and subdivided legally by the owner, will also come into force July 1.

The laws were passed at the 1971 legislative session.

Low Income Group Out of Funds

Victoria Low Income Group project which provided housework for about 30 women once to three times weekly has exhausted the federal grant which got it started.

The Housecleaning Rehabilitation Association is still operating, says Low Income Group social worker Reg Clarkson, and is providing an extra $40 or $50 a month for welfare mothers.

But the $10,000 department of health and welfare grant which paid for transportation, babysitting and office expenses has run out. A woman who was being paid to accept jobs and make assignments now is working without pay in hopes the federal grant will be renewed.

HOUSE NEEDED

The Low Income Group has applications in for a number of projects besides housecleaning rehabilitation. It hopes to get a house approved as a day care centre, start up a babysitting service, and provide an odd job employment service for men.

Clarkson said Victoria could use an organization which would supply babysitters on short notice.

"I'm not suggesting we would compete with full-time babysitters for working mothers but we would fill in the odd day on short notice if mother wanted a day away or if a regular babysitter was ill."

The women who have been doing housework negotiate their rates of pay with the customer, and these range from $1.60 an hour for light chores up to $2 for floor scrubbing and wall washing.

KEY FEATURE

The key feature of the project, Clarkson said, is the loan fund maintained by donations from clients. Five loans have been made, one to a woman who bought a car in order to take a steady job, and four minor ones to get telephones reconnected.

"It's a small thing, but a woman could miss a lot of work if she couldn't be reached by phone," Clarkson said.

PARK SECTION SOLD TO PULP INTERESTS

The provincial cabinet has approved sale of 15 acres of a 24-acre provincial park near Kamloops to Kamloops Pulp and Paper Ltd.

The company will pay $30,000 for the land and will also make a $320,000 donation for park acquisition by the Kamloops Parks Association somewhere else in the region.

The 15 acres is in Mission Flats Park, located along the Thompson River about three miles from Kamloops. The park was established in 1967.

Utilities Post Filled

F. S. McKinnon has been appointed to the public utilities commission replacing E. W. Bassett who died last month.

McKinnon, chairman of the pollution control board which is to be phased out by the cabinet land use committee, will be paid a salary of $19,100.

Painter Dies

PARIS (AP) — Marcel Gromaire, a noted painter and tapestry designer, died Sunday night after a long illness. He was 78. He was one of the leaders of a revival in French tapestry work, and his paintings and tapestries were acquired by museums through France and other European countries.

The 21 days of inquiry were held last fall.

Mr. Justice Morrow recommended elected representatives refrain from transactions with the city, or at least obtain department approval for any dealings, then table the approval with city council so the transaction would be public knowledge.

He also said future thefts from the city should result in charges. Personnel who had testified under the Canada Evidence Act during the inquiry that they stole from the city should not be fired or charged, but moved to other departments, he said.

PILOT SURVIVES GOLD RIVER CRASH

The pilot of a small plane whose aircraft crashed while he was crop dusting in the Gold River area this morning is reported in satisfactory condition in hospital at Campbell River.

James Evans of Chilliwack was pulled from the wreckage by local loggers, RCMP said.

The officer said the crash occurred about 6:30 a.m. and the aircraft belonged to an Abbotsford airline firm.

year. The small increase last month was insufficient to change the purchasing power of the dollar perceptibly.

The index is based on the movement of prices for a group of more than 300 goods and services which figured largest in the purchases of urban families in 1957.

Commodities make up 70 per cent of the total, and their prices were up four-tenths of one per cent in the month, and only three-tenths of one per cent in the year.

Services which account for the remaining 30 per cent rose by three-tenths of one per cent last month, and 5.2 per cent in the year.

CHALLENGE SWIM between Lighthouse Philosopher Bill Scott, who is "crowding 74," and health club operator Ald. Ove Witt of Victoria, who is 30 years Scott's junior, ended in a three-length victory for Scott. The race was a highlight of the Victoria Amateur Swim Club's third annual swimathon. Today, Scott says he's highly indignant. "I swam 38 lengths to prove there's no generation gap. They had no right to presuppose I'm an adult. They should have put me in the kids' category. Then I could have swum four hours instead of just one."

Ping-Pongers to Meet Premier Chou

By JOHN RODERICK

PEKING (AP) — Members of the U.S. table tennis team are excitedly looking forward to what promises to be the high point of their week's visit to China, a meeting Wednesday with Premier Chou En-lai.

The prospect of talking with the Chinese leader outweighed the team's anticipation of its first matches this afternoon with Chinese table tennis stars. The 15 Americans were told this morning of the meeting with Chou as they left their hotel to practice for today's matches.

The Chinese opened their borders to another foreign table tennis team today, welcoming a seven-man British team which crossed the Lo Wu border bridge at Hong Kong for a two-week visit. Delegation leader Charles Wyles said he invited a Chinese team to England for return matches and was told a Peking team would arrive in England in December or January.

Canadian and Colombian teams already are in China, along with the Americans. All were invited during the world table tennis tournament in Nagoya, Japan, which ended April 7.

The Canadian and Colombian players played matches and exchanged gifts with Chinese players Monday, the New China news agency reported.

NO RESULTS GIVEN

The agency gave no results of the matches played but it said the Canadians put on a "fine performance" against the Chinese.

The agency said the Canadians gave Chinese players badges of the Canadian Table Tennis Association and the Colombians presented gifts of coffee. The Chinese, in return, gave the Canadians and Colombians table tennis bats and balls.

An estimated 18,000 spectators, including members of the Peking Municipal Revolutionary Committee an dthe Awl-China Sports Federation, were present.

The Canadian players included Larry Lee, 25, who was born in Canton, southern China, now attending the University of British Columbia; team captain Derek Wall, Toronto; Erroll Caetano, also of Toronto; Helen Simerl, Toronto; Joyce Hecht, Montreal, and Violetta Nesukaitis, Toronto.

Margaret Walder of Toronto, head of the Canadian team, and J. M. Fraser, Canadian charge d'affaires in Peking, were also present, the agency said.

The American-Chinese table tennis bouts were expected to attract a capacity stadium crowd of 20,000 spectators.

U.S. team member John Tannehill, a university student from Middleport, Ohio, returned to the hotel after becoming ill this morning, raising the prospect that the American team may be one man short in the exhibition matches.

Besides their meeting with Chou, the Americans on Wednesday will visit the Summer Palace on Peking's outskirts and attend a performance of a Chinese opera.

They fly to Shanghai Thursday morning, where they will spend the night before going on to Canton. They are scheduled to return to Hong Kong Saturday.

ORGANIZER TACKLES BIG OPPONENT

All-Canadian Union Sought

VANCOUVER (CP)—A new all-Canadian union movement starts its campaign today to nationalize this country's largest union—the 150,000-member United Steelworkers of America.

The move, if successful, could involve 13,000 Steelworkers who are members of 44 British Columbia locals.

"We will be in contact with major Steelworkers' locals in B.C.," Bud Arnold, a former Steelworkers' organizer and now national organizing chairman of the new union — the United Metal and Mine Workers of Canada, said in a telephone interview from Sudbury, Ont., Monday.

"Everybody in Canada has talked about this country's union movement having more autonomy—being our own bosses in our own country — but nobody has done much about it."

"So now we're doing something about it. And we are starting here in Sudbury, the stronghold of Canada's largest union. We hope it will be a peaceful changeover but I don't mind telling you that we are afraid."

In a letter written to Steelworkers' international president I. W. Abel, Mr. Arnold said he hopes his group will replace the Steelworkers within one year "with Canadian Steelworkers' membership approval."

"We ask that you give us your decision on the proposed referendum within 15 calendar days of receipt of this letter and its enclosures. We also ask that if you reply in the affirmative, that the referendum take place in Canada within 1971."

Meanwhile, Steelworkers' national director William Mahoney said Mr. Arnold's attempt to nationalize the union in Canada was not serious.

"He's a self-appointed spokesman for a non-existent organization," he said. "He doesn't represent anybody but himself."

The Steelworkers' Western Canada director, Larry Sefton, said Mr. Arnold once organized for the union, but "I don't take anything he does seriously."

Don Dunphy, head of Steelworkers in B.C., said:

"Arnold is liable to get himself killed in Sudbury. It's a rough town. I wonder who is sponsoring him?"

SPENT HIM $2,000

Mr. Arnold said he has sunk $2,000 of his own money in the project and that the organization has enough money to last one more week.

Time for Co-Operative Action

THE REPORT OF A TASK force on water pollution, sponsored by United States industrial critic Ralph Nader, makes chilling reading, particularly when it deals with the Great Lakes. The report claims that industrial contamination causes four times as much pollution as sewage does, yet U.S. government measures have failed to control industrial polluters, "around 40,000" of whom "are routinely violating the 1890 Refuse Act." And it adds that Lake Superior, the largest of the Great Lakes, may deteriorate much more rapidly than did Lake Erie, which in less than 50 years was reduced to its present state of widespread pollution causing injury to health and property.

The Nader report comes three months after the January report of the International Joint Commission, which deplored the advanced state of eutrophication in Lake Erie and warned that an accelerated process was extending this to Lake Ontario as well. Since the international boundary runs through all the Great Lakes except Lake Michigan, the destruction of these vast freshwater reservoirs is of vital concern to Canada. If the Lake Superior situation is now under increasing threat, the urging of the IJC that more effective co-operation to preserve the Great Lakes be initiated immediately by the two countries should be heeded.

The Nader prediction is based in part on the fact that Lake Erie drains at ten times the rate of Lake Superior, so that deterioration in the larger body of water, with its slower replacement, would be more intensified. The report charges that a United States expenditure of $3 billions over 15 years has failed to reduce pollution "in any major body of water." It claims that much of this is due to failure to prosecute industrial polluters, only 14 industries so far having been charged.

It is clear that Canadian portions of the Great Lakes will suffer with the American areas, yet the larger industries and populations on the southern shores are causing most of the pollution. Canada has instituted some preliminary moves to remedy its own situation, but any effective action obviously must entail efforts on both sides of the border.

The Nader picture of widespread and largely unchecked pollution of fresh water sources by industry brings into view another important factor in American-originated plans to direct huge volumes of Canadian water into the United States. The late General McNaughton, long a key Canadian member of the IJC, used to say that the United States would have no threat of a pure water shortage if it cleaned up the large supplies it already wastes through uncontrolled pollution.

This point, taken in conjunction with Mr. Nader's condemnation of Washington's lack of action in curbing industrial pollution, should be the realistic answer to United States interests which want to add Canadian water imports to the large supplies already being destroyed, thereby eventually creating an unnecessary shortage in both countries.

". . . If you don't like our peace proposals . . . why don't you go back where you came from . . .?"

Harsh Facts

Toronto Star

The report on post-secondary education contains some hopeful hints that developments of the last few years have educated the educators.

The report proceeds from the assumption that the rapid increase in the number of young people in the province (the result of the post war "baby boom") and the continuing demand for higher education will completely overload Ontario's existing universities, with the result that by the mid-70s they will have to reject one in every five qualified applicants for admission.

A few years ago, university administrators, faced with this situation, would have called unhesitatingly for a crash building program.

Instead of proposing this, the subcommittee recommends that the undergraduate flood should be gradually shifted to the new colleges of applied arts and technology. This would leave the universities free to concentrate on work that requires "highly qualified, research-oriented staff."

This recommendation suggests that academic leaders are beginning to realize two harsh facts. One is that the public in Ontario is not prepared to pay out more and more taxes to finance the indefinite expansion of universities. The other is that the great expansion which has taken place since 1945 has harmed both universities and students.

The Veterans Tell Tales of a Nation That Has Run Amok

By Frank Mankiewicz and Tom Braden from Washington

JOHN KERRY is the kind of young man you'd be happy to find courting your daughter. Yale '66, with three years in the Navy in Vietnam, where he won a Silver Star for heroism and came out an unscathed lieutenant (j.g.).

He will be in Washington this week as a leader of the first group of veterans in our history to oppose an on-going war. Kerry and thousands of colleagues — Vietnam Veterans Against the War — will be wearing their uniforms while they camp here, call on congressmen and give back to the nation the medals they won.

"We don't want a bunch of Nuremberg trials," says Kerry, referring to suggestions that Gen. William Westmoreland or former Defence Secretary Robert McNamara be tried for ordering systematic violations of the Geneva Convention. "That wouldn't accomplish anything. We want the American people to know what they have done to Vietnam."

The veterans will describe "free fire zones." There was a time, they will explain, when a "free fire zone" meant an area suspected of harboring enemy. All civilians who wished to evacuate were helped to do so. They will describe how this Pentagon-inspired plan degenerated into "squirrel hunts" in which warnings to evacuate were cursory or ignored and the "squirrel" was any civilian and the hunter any GI in a helicopter.

They will talk about "H and I" — harassment and interdiction fire — which became in time the indiscriminate use of artillery on populated areas in order to terrorize the population.

They will talk about "search and destroy" missions — where the body count often exceeded the count of captured weapons by 50-1 and which included the use of .50-caliber machine guns against personnel and acts specifically forbidden by the rules of war.

They will talk about the use of napalm, of defoliation chemicals believed to cause fetal malformations, of deliberate poisoning of food and water supplies.

They will talk of the torture of men and women prisoners, including the widespread application of electric current to the genitals through the wires of a field telephone. They will talk of units under orders to take no prisoners at all.

They will name the names of cities in Cambodia — Snoul and Mimot — which have been destroyed by B-52s; and in Laos, Attetbu and Sarabane. They will nail the fiction that U.S. bombers have never flown sorties against inhabited cities and towns in South Vietnam. They will try to describe how, as a result of this policy, South Vietnam has become part refugee camp, part brothel, and how Saigon, a city built for 500,000, has been turned into a refugee camp trying to house over 3 million.

They will testify, in short, to all of the things which have led to the terrible statistic of Vietnam: The enemy has killed 26,000 civilians since the war began — American bombing and shelling has caused 325,000 civilian deaths in South Vietnam alone, and thousands more in Laos and Cambodia.

"We have an obligation to talk about these things," says John Kerry, "and we think that when Vietnam veterans in uniform with medals start to talk about them, people will listen."

The question is whether anyone wants to "listen" any more. When the president of the United States goes on national TV to explain why we will still be fighting in Vietnam throught 1972, even he must ask, "Can you believe me?"

Those who are made sick by what we have done to Vietnam are angry and looking for high-level culprits. Those who will not face those facts are angry, too, and looking for "traitors" in the peace movement. Those who are only tired and torn want Vietnam to go away and leave them alone, and they are becoming angry, too.

Mr. Nixon has either misread this anger or determined that he can ride it out. Lt. Kerry and his bemedalled veterans offer evidence that he is wrong.

A Special Tariff for the Maritimes?

THE ATLANTIC DEVELOPment Council (ADC), an independent Canadian body set up in 1969 to consider economic strategy for the Maritimes, has issued a report calling for the creation of 170,000 new jobs and a capital expenditure of about $25 billions over the next ten years.

The report was generally favorable to Ottawa's efforts to alleviate Maritime economic disparities but was highly critical of federal fiscal policy; the chairman of the ADC, Prof. W. Y. Smith, said: "In the management of the economy the Government has been overly obsessed by inflation. We have had overkill almost every time we have had a serious inflationary situation since the war."

Among other recommendations, the Council calls for special tariff treatment for the Maritimes. The new manufacturing plants and allied service industries which it proposes would rely heavily on trade with the U.S. for between 50 and 60 per cent of output. Upon being asked whether the federal government could arrange a special Maritime tariff in the manner of the auto pact, Regional Economic Expansion Minister, Jean Marchand, replied: "There is no impossibility with this. I think it is possible for the Maritime area. Why not?" Mr. Marchand's cabinet colleague, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, however, is more skeptical of the possibility of a special Maritime tariff vis a vis the United States.

Another interesting feature of the Council's report is the request for a federally-financed regional intelligence and promotion agency. The ADC also wants Ottawa to set up special agencies to play a direct part in debt and equity financing of industry.

The Regional Economic Expansion Minister, Mr. Marchand, has voiced general agreement with the report but it raises many questions which deserve national as well as departmental attention. Atlantic development is an aspect of economic federalism and the ADC's recommendations should set off a debate on the nature of this area of our governmental system — particularly in light of the request for freer Maritime trade. What are the limits of accommodation in this inadequately explored but urgent aspect of national policy?

Not Alone by 'Green Revolution'

CHEERS ARE STILL RISING for the "green revolution," which has greatly increased the wheat acreage of India as well as the nation's per-acre yield in the last decade, and extended mechanization to many of the progressive regions. But some of the difficulties of the green revolution are becoming more apparent.

At this point, the miracle seeds that are greatly increasing yields are almost entirely wheat. The counterparts in rice have proven highly susceptible to disease and to drought — a situation which has returned them to the research centres. And of India's cultivated area, 31 per cent is devoted to rice, the staple cereal, compared with 15 per cent for wheat.

Even in wheat, certain shortages cause a drag on what should be a surging development. Not enough fertilizer is available to meet demands, nor are tractors in sufficient supply. Beyond these obstacles is the social structure of India — the village culture which has sustained and supported life, often at a mere subsistence level, over the centuries. To enjoy the continuing fruits of the green revolution, the village culture must undergo changes. But these should come in a gradual manner which will preserve the village concept as the basis for technological improvements.

The green revolution is vitally significant in a country where the population adds 35,000 babies each day. But the scientific and technological advances must be integrated with an age-old social system. There will be no gain if modern progress solves the problem of starvation but destroys a way of life which appears to be essential to the less tangible needs of the Indian people.

Correspondence From Our Readers

Government Opportunity

I hope that the people in the Government have read the report that Sandringham Hospital is up for sale. Here is an opportunity, as the advertisements say, to advance into management quickly.

The establishment of publicly-owned hospitals for the elderly is long overdue in this city.—H. H. Bridge, 3904 Shelbourne.

'Organization Man'

Perhaps the most tragic result of the current crisis situation and the University of Victoria is that as Canadians we can no longer rely on the principles of justice and responsibility which were long thought to be a part of our British heritage.

Some 15 years ago in his book, "Organization Man," William Whyte observed that in America traditional legal ideas of fairness and equity were being usurped by what he called a "management ethic." This ethic centres on the belief that all problems can be dealt with through a good dose of public relations and the application of "scientific" management principles.

This glossed-over, prepackaged thinking has worked well. It has brought us TV dinners, background music and hamburgers. Unfortunately it has also brought us Bruce Partridge.

Anyone familiar with Canadian history knows we have been fortunate enough to inherit the principle of responsible government from our British ancestors. Under this system, if there is any reason to believe an individual in public life has lost the confidence of his supporters, he resigns.—Jim S. Fowles, 2133 Oak Bay.

Pressuring the Young

I would like to question the worth of a letter or a signature on a controversial issue if that issue is not understood or truthfully supported by the writer, and written on his own volition. I am referring to some canvassing which is being done today by certain people on certain issues.

On the current Uvic controversy, which in my opinion should never have been thrown to the public, a daughter of mine was present at a private gathering of people where a Uvic professor tried to persuade the company to write letters asking for what he called the firing of the president of the university. When some protested that they did not know what to write, this professor went so far as to write a letter for them to copy.

Another daughter of mine, at school in class instruction time was persuaded as to the merits of a position taken by one Sierra Club in its attempt to fight the Provincial Government's lease of Crown lands to the forest industries, in order to get this land permanently for a national park. Is it right for a teacher to use his special position to persuade students in order to get signatures for his pet project?

The Sierra Club could place the livelihood of quite a lot of people in jeopardy. Would that teacher, if his job was placed directly in danger by doing so, still support this club? — Mrs. T. Cooke, 205-715 Vancouver.

Criticizes a Governor

Mr. Justin Harbord, a government appointee to the board of governors of the University of Victoria has been much in the news lately. He evidently feels that neither students nor faculty nor the association of university teachers have a legitimate voice in any university decisions. Apparently he believes the University should be operated for the sole benefit of the president and the board of governors.

His comments in the past few days indicate a complete lack of understanding of both the nature and aims of university life. It seems anomalous that despite his obvious lack of qualifications Mr. Harbord is in such an important position.

It is impossible for anyone in the university or the community at large to have any confidence whatsoever in the board of governors at Uvic when one of its appointed members makes such fatuous remarks as Mr. Harbord has done. It is a tribute to the coolness of Uvic students that they have not reacted more extremely to his provocations.

In any case it is quite evident that the board of governors needs restructuring so that its members better represent the university and the community. As a start I propose that Mr. Harbord resign and be replaced by a representative of the labor movement. — David Coburn, 2367 Central.

Not 'Miles for Millions'

Recent publicity has been given to a Bikathon sponsored by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, the Victorian Days Society, various department stores and bicycle dealers. It has been stated that they would be using the "Miles for Millions" route.

There are two points to clear up. One, the route which the Bikathon proposes to use is not the current "Miles for Millions" route but is merely based on the route of 1967.

Secondly, the Victoria "Miles for Millions" Committee is in no way associated with this Chamber of Commerce exercise. "Miles for Millions" is entirely a volunteer effort whose total proceeds are used for charitable purposes in Victoria and around the world.—Bruce A. McKean, chairman, 1971 Victoria "Miles for Millions" committee.

Authentic 'Victoriana'

As a visitor to your delightful city I have been kept very busy seeing the great number of "points of interest," your museums, parks, etc., your beautiful Parliament Buildings and the numerous reminders of the British heritage.

As a Britisher the one place which gave me most pleasure is the little bit of Stratford-on-Avon here on your own doorstep. I refer to that wonderful collection of "Victoriana" shown at Point Ellice House. I have never seen a more complete, not to mention authentic, collection of reminders of our British past. The owners, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Reilly deserve every congratulation and appreciation for the time, patience, love and labor they have given to provide such a wonderful exhibition containing something for every lover of antiquity.—E. Higgins, Stratford on Avon.

Museum Trophies

The five dead bears illustrated in an article by the Curator of Birds and Mammals of the Provincial Museum in the Times of April 8 were very impressive, but it gives further point to the questions that have been asked by leading naturalists as to the purpose for which the museum shoots our rarer mammals and birds.

In response to criticism over the shooting of several rare birds recently, the museum circulated widely a pamphlet outlining museum policy in this matter. This pamphlet defended what it termed "scientific collecting," and it specifically stated "this does not include curios and trophies."

Yet now we have the curator advocating selective breeding of the white phase of the Black Bear specifically because "this would greatly enhance the species as a trophy animal." Is this, then, what is meant by "scientific collecting?"

The stuffed bears in the photograph remind us yet again of the expert marksmanship and deadly efficiency with which these men can kill the rarest of our mammals and birds to exhibit them as trophies for a gullible public to gape at, somehow believing it is all done in the name of conservation.—Katharine B. Suttill, 5065 Lockhaven.

Depressed Salinas Workers

May I express my views on the plight of agricultural workers in California? Produce from this state is on sale in most Victoria supermarkets every day of the year, so I believe that the misery suffered by many Californian farmworkers is something that concerns us directly.

The lettuce-workers in Salinas, California, for instance, have been on strike for eight months in their attempt to obtain humane working conditions. They have charged the large-scale growers with using child labor and are now trying to prevent them from employing persons under 12 years of age in the fields. If this is true, and there is every reason to believe it is, our own government should be persuaded to prohibit the importation of produce from this region into B.C. Shoppers should also be asked to purchase only that agricultural produce bearing the union stamp. — Barry F. Beardsmore, 2594 Beach.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"NO VEGETABLES FOR ME. MY TONGUE IS BORED."

Looking Back

From the Times of April 13, 1911:

It is unlawful in British Columbia to marry your brother's widow, according to a decision rendered in County court in Vancouver this morning by Judge Lampman in the case of Herbert Baker.

After being refused a marriage licence in Vancouver, Baker went to New Westminster and secured one by making a declaration that there was no legal impediment to the marriage.

The court declared the marriage illegal but allowed Baker to go on suspended sentence.

Machines Chew Up Masters

THE NATION
An Editorial

The automobile is of course unrivaled as a killer of civilians: 50,000 deaths and 1.5 million injuries last year. But, though the car is the most proficient of mechanized killers, other contenders, feeble as yet, are springing up.

The mower, leader in its class, maims far more often than it kills, but its record in the latter respect is still impressive. Rotary lawn mowers were responsible for some 140,000 injuries in 1969.

Lawn mowers are at least useful, but the snowmobile, operated for sport, kills and maims people too. More than 1.5 million of these vehicles have been let loose on the countryside since 1964, and sales have increased 50 to 100 per cent a year. This year the increase has tapered off sharply, at which no one will mourn except the manufacturers and salesmen.

★ ★ ★

Last year eighty-four snowmobile fatalities occurred in the United States, and a roughly equal number in Canada. About 30 per cent of the fatalities involve collisions with moving motor vehicles. Some snowmobile drivers attempt to cross frozen lakes, break through the ice, and drown.

There is a drinking problem among snowmobile drivers, as among motorists. Not the least objection is the noise which, in effect, brings the roar of traffic into what was once quiet wilderness.

Trial magazine for January-February contains an article by a lawyer, Stanley E. Sacks, on "The Unsafe Golf Cart." Golf was once a healthy exercise; it made people walk, which is good for heart and lungs. Now, 200,000 golf carts are in use, and the owners (or renters) are almost as sedentary on the course as at their desks.

Mr. Sacks made a survey of patents covering golf carts and found that every feature was mentioned except safety. Some of these perambulators have such weak brakes that even when they are fully applied on such slopes as are normally found on golf courses, the carts will keep rolling.

The underlying difficulty appears to be that power, whether appropriately applied or not, has an irresistible appeal to great numbers of Americans.

An electrically powered refrigerator or freezer makes sense; the automobile makes sense too, although the cost we pay in polluted air, as well as in fatalities and injuries, is only beginning to dawn on us.

However, if we must worship power for its own sake, let us at least heed the dangers inherent in its applications. It is bad enough to look silly without being savaged by our toys.

The architecture of enormity may endanger the health and humanity of man.

A Choice for the Mega Society

By WOLF VON ECKARDT

How fast do we want to fly?

How high and how big do we want to build?

The fundamental issue raised by what history will surely note as the great SST debate also involves architecture.

The same infatuation with technology for its own sake that has led to the megabomb has also lead to megastructures and megalopolis.

A new wave of humanism is rejecting both.

Aviation's "technology of haste," as Daniel J. Boorstin calls it, that produced the SST, is architecture's technology of enormity. It has produced New York's 110-storey, twin-towered World Trade Centre and Chicago's even higher Sears Building and is about to cover acres of land with multi-level "cities-within-the-city."

Reassess Progress

If the defeat of the SST in Congress means, as many people claim, that America is beginning to reassess its idea of progress, we also ought to question whether super-skyscrapers and megastructures constitute progress. They, too, may endanger the environment and the health and humanity of man.

The discussion about the design of the man-made environment — and that, in the end, is what architecture is all about — has been going on for some times. It is far from settled. We are building both technocratic architecture and humanistic architecture, at the same time.

We are also building a lot of structures designed by architects who would evade the issue with a playful or brutal expressionism or with what I would call nonarchitecture.

And then, of course, we are building a lot of kitsch, that is buildings that are really not architecture at all but that only superficially affect the style of some genuine architectural effort. They are not designed, but "styled," gift-wrapped in some pretension.

Today's basic architectural ambiguity may be creative, though I think there is a difference between mere originality and genuine creativity. But the ambiguity makes our cities and suburbs chaotic. If, as Henry Churchill put it, we first shape our buildings and then our buildings shape us, this chaotic architecture is not only a reflection of the chaos of our time. It also contributes to it.

The conflict between technology and humanism and beween technocratic architecture and humanist architecure is only apparent, however. We can and must employ technology to make our world more livable and our buildings and cities more human.

Architecture, in fact, is the art, science and technique — the technology, if you will — of designing the man-made environment. There is no fundamental disagreement between the two leading architectural philosophers, Lewis Mumford and Buckminster Fuller. As architecture critic Allan Temko has observed, "to Mumford, the humanist, as to Fuller, the technologist, the very survival of civilization hinges on the humane use of depersonalized technology."

It is idiotic and futile to be against technology. The question is only how it is used and for what.

And that, of course, depends on what society wants, what it aspires to. Theocratic Egypt is perhaps best remembered for the enormous technological achievement of building the pyramids. Does democratic America want to be remembered for the World Trade Centre and the Sears Building which put the bureaucrats of the New York Port Authority and Sears, Roebuck a bit higher above a people who have not yet found a practical way to dispose of their garbage?

Few Advantages

Nor are these super-skyscrapers much of a technological advance. They could be built because technology came up with the so-called sky lobby system. It means that a highspeed express elevator whisks you 40 or 80 stories up to a lobby where you then transfer to a local elevator.

This saves space that can be rented and therefore made the 1,350-foot-high Trade Centre economically feasible. Then technology came up with the bright idea of a double-decker express elevator and Sears could profitably go another 100 feet higher. Technically this has long been possible.

The private feasibility of these corporate pyramids, however, is not a public gain. As in ancient Egypt, architecture of enormity may awe us with its people but the heavy economic and social cost of increased congestion.

With these inflations of the corporate ego comes an inflationary corruption of words and their meaning. The new god-kings claim to be benign. Their megalomania is public-related as good for you and me. When architect Minoru Yamasaki was asked why he diesigned two 110-storey buildings for the Trade Centre instead of one 220-storey tower, he reportedly countered that he wanted "to keep it in the human scale."

Contrived Complexity

If the architecture of enormity dwarfs us, the new "expressionist" buildings exclude us. Their architects tell us that there is a deep, mystical meaning in the often bizarre concrete sculptures and their contrived complexity that would make medieval citadels out of parking garages and withdrawn fortresses — ramparts and all — out of office buildings, churches and museums.

I don't see it. Sometimes these abstract expressions of an artist's inner struggle come off as a private work of art. Sometimes they even succeed as a civic work of art. More often they are a cop-out. And when the hacks get high on this psychedelic form-giving, it can be pretty distressing for the rest of us.

I like the ingenuity of Kevin Roche's non-architecture. Roche solves the problem of putting a building where there ought to be no building. He reconciles the demands of mammon with the demands of the urban ecology by designing all but invisible buildings pressed into double duty. He did not think there ought to be a big museum in congested downtown, Oakland, Calif., for instance. So he created a lovely, terraced garden and tubed the museum under it.

Roche likewise did not think Lower Manhattan needed another skyscraper when a client (whose identity has not yet been revealed) commissioned him to build one. So he proposes to raise the building on stilts 160 feet high. On the ground you can't really see it. But you can see some fine historic buildings next door and you can feel the sunshine and the relief of a landscaped plaza between those stilts.

Sunshine, relief from the miseries and tensions of a "technology of haste," of frenetic automobility, of the frozen dust of airconditioning and of tranquilizing muzak, the golden proportion between community and privacy, an awareness of nature and of other people — that is the promise of a new humanistic architecture.

You can see its beginnings in Moshe Safdie's Habitat, where we can enjoy both: The advantages of high urban concentrations and the territoriality of a private house with its private garden along the social space of a street in the sky.

The care-free clustering of houses and the inclusion, rather than exclusion, of various human activities — playground, shops, schools, community facilities and amenities — tend to have a medieval look.

Perhaps this new architecture of integration (in contrast to zoned segregation) constitutes a neo-medievalism. But those romantic medieval walled cities and hilltowns with their hustling markets must have smelled bad. We can make the neo-medieval ones a lot more pleasant with the technology of waste recycling and other potentials for public health and comfort.

Potentials

The as yet all-but-untapped potentials of transportation and communication can enable us to overcome the need for undue concentration. We won't have to stack hundreds of families and thousands of office workers on top of each other once we give them horizontal vehicles that move as fast and conveniently as elevators.

No, we need not run out of space. It depends only on how we use it. It is part of the new humanist architecture to design with nature, to make our buildings part of the natural ecology instead of letting them pollute the earth.

That is, I think, the most exciting promise of technology, which, like architecture, like all of western civilization, is now at the crossroads.

One road leads to Orwellian technocracy. The other to true democracy in the way we live.

The Workers Are Unhappy

By
NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

Everywhere there is more trouble with work, workers and working. Nobody's happy, but precisely why isn't easy to say.

Some workers have a greater antipathy for their unions than for their bosses. But then you also have large groups like teachers and nurses now joining the unions they once thought beneath their professional dignity.

The whole world of work is tumescent with distempers and discontents none of us understands and few are trying to learn about. One of the few is Alfred Vogel whose article in the Harvard Business Review warns employers of an imminent upheaval among the 13 million clerical workers in the U.S.

On the basis of a huge pile of data collected by his Opinion Research Corporation (a sampling of 25,000 employees in over 90 large corporations) he writes that, "during the last five years there has been a marked and growing dissatisfaction among these workers — to the extent that many may soon turn to unions for a solution to their problems."

The median income of women secretaries, bookkeepers and file clerks is $4,000 a year as opposed to $7,000 for males doing the same kind of work. Until now unions have found these women impossible to organize, but evidently these workers are no longer able to kid themselves that they are white collar individualists, deferred to and respected, and not part of the blue collar mass.

"Many clerical employees are working under circumstances that differ little from factory conditions," says Vogel, "behind the marble facade and doric columns of almost any bank or insurance company are huge, bullpen areas inhabited by regiments of clerks and paper-pushers. The work itself is fragmented and often experienced as dull and boring."

Clerical workers, then, have all the disabilities of the assembly line, but with lower pay and none of the advantages of union membership. With no counter leverage against the boss, it's not surprising that Vogel finds that negative feelings toward management have increased more rapidly among the clerks with the erstwhile dainty pretensions who labor in the front office than among the guys back in the shop.

But the workers also report no action is taken. Vogel quotes a public utility clerk as remarking, "Raises are few and far between, and everyone gets the same amount regardless of performance. It's very discouraging. It's not the boss' fault. He tries."

●

Teaching the office manager to be sensitive and communicate doesn't mean a fig if he doesn't have the authority to act. And middle-level management doesn't. The bureaucratization of work has diminished him also. Other studies show that middle-level executives, the captains and majors of the work army, have the same complaint as the clerks — raises and rewards given automatically to all without regard to performance.

Often, when a merit raise is given, the boss tells Jones, "We don't want this to get around the office. Keep it a secret."

That may protect the boss from pressure to hike other salaries, but it sabotages the white collar notion of individual distinction, and reinforces the belief that pay increments derive, not from exceptional accomplishment, but from negotiations between power blocks, time serving and crawling up the ladder of bureaucracy.

Long dead in government, in unionized work and in the corporate paper factories, the principle of monetary rewards for merit is even being crowded in activities where high pay and individual excellence have been most closely yoked.

●

"There are guys in the $50,000 class who hit .300 one year, .260 the next and wind up with raises," says Harry Walker, manager of the Houston Astros baseball team. "With that kind of situation there's no way to make a player drive himself if he doesn't want to. Whether we like it or not fear is the thing that still governs all of us and the fear of getting a cut is disappearing."

Millions upon millions of workers want to change that. They want to get rid of fear and insecurity, but is Harry Walker right? Will the determination to do the outstanding job vanish with our old system of rewards and punishments? Are new incentives possible?

If not, is there going to be more sloppy, mediocre work, a declining productivity, and a growing inability to get necessary tasks done as being on the dole and working grow more and more alike?

"There are no answers to such questions. Indeed, they're seldom even asked, but they must be or our most ambitious goals for medical care, inflation, housing, welfare, education and leisure are not going to be met."

Learning English In Chinese

By GERALD LEACH

American scientists have found that children who have difficulty in learning to read English words or suffer from dyslexia ("word blindness") learn to read Chinese with remarkable ease.

In tests in a Philadelphia school, children who couldn't even read words like "pip" and "lag" were able to read up to 30 Chinese characters after only 2½ to 5½ hours' tutoring.

Children seem to find Chinese characters, which represent whole words, far easier to grasp than the English language system of forming words from abstract sound units, or phonemes. The novelty of tackling Chinese also boosts their flagging motivation.

●

The Philadelphia scientists suggest that dyslexia isn't what many experts suppose it to be — a fault in the memory circuits to do with vision and hearing — and could be cured by giving the child less baffling reading material than strings of letters and phonemes. They opt for a system based on the syllable.

. . . And So Are Their Bosses

By WILFRID LIST
The Globe and Mail

The theme that trade unions are too powerful and must be cut down to size continues to be heard in management circles. The litany has undoubtedly caught on with a wide section of the public that sees a direct link between wage increases and price increases.

★ ★ ★

There is also a growing acceptance, fostered in part by some management spokesmen, of the idea that the entire adversary process of collective bargaining has become an irrational exercise.

The fact that unions are a firmly established institution and one of the power structures in society has deprived them of some of the public sympathy normally reserved for the underdog. Even some intellectuals and churchmen, once partisans of organized labor, have lost their zeal.

Newspaper reports of $15,000-a-year plumbers or electricians (whether they actually attain that annual income) have colored the attitude of a wide segment of the public.

Despite the fact that unions are an important element in the economy and society, there is often more imagery than fact in the concept of unions as big powerful instruments before which management cowers.

Power is a relative term. The issue raised by management is that the balance of power has shifted from management to labor. But it is neither appropriate nor accurate to generalize from individual situations.

★ ★ ★

Over the past few years there has certainly been a shift in power from construction industry to the construction unions. There may be other individual situations where unions have more muscle than management. But the reverse is also true. The power relationship is a fluid one.

A union needs power to deal as an equal with a big corporation such as General Motors or the Steel Company of Canada. The strong unions dealing with a big employer have the power to shut down a company, and it is that fact of industrial life that provides the bargaining leverage.

But the battle of attrition entailed in a strike often results in no more than a draw: a few concessions by management over a pre-strike offer, a depleted union treasury and workers licking their financial wounds.

But the very same unions that can tackle the big corporations often have their noses rubbed in the dirt by the small employer. In those situations the "powerful" union is about as strong as the weakest local. There are numerous cases on record where the Steelworkers, for example, have been stomped to death by management when the union attempted to win a first contract in a small plant.

So perhaps what big management is complaining about when it says that the balance of power has swung and needs to be redressed is that they have to deal with the unions as equals.

CMD Appointment

At the annual meeting of the board of directors of Canada's Manitoba Distillery Limited, Mr. Leo Perron of Winnipeg was elected to the post of President and General Manager.

Prior to his appointment Mr. Perron was General Sales Manager of the Company. In his new capacity, he will continue the contribution his vitality and dynamism have made to the outstanding growth of this rapidly expanding Western Canadian enterprise.

Can. Western

New income of Canadian Western Natural Gas Co. Ltd. dropped slightly in 1970 to $2.86 million or $1.36 a share compared with $2.92 million or $1.39 a share in 1969.

The company's annual report said a mild southern Alberta winter, with a corresponding decrease in the amount of gas used for space heating, was mostly to blame for the lower earnings.

Operating revenue increased $1.26 million to $26.45 million.

Russia Gaining In Space Race

By HOWARD BENEDICT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years ago, April 12, 1961, Russian cosmonaut Yuri A. Gagarin became the first man to rocket into space, transforming into reality man's ancient dreams of travelling beyond his home planet.

The race to the moon was on.

The United States won it decisively in 1969 and grabbed an overwhelming lead in space exploration.

But now the great scientific and technological teams in the U.S. are breaking up. Rockets, launch pads and other facilities are being put into mothballs. Unless Congress votes funds for future programs, the U.S. will end manned space flight for the foreseeable future in 1973.

Conversely, Russia is accelerating its space effort. Some knowledgeable observers believe the next big plum in space, an orbiting station, will bear the Red Star and that within a few years the Soviets will dominate space. They claim much of the Russian effort is aimed at perfecting an orbiting military capability.

Gagarin's flight lasted one orbit — 108 minutes from liftoff to landing.

SECOND SETBACK

The U.S., still smarting from Sputnik I in 1957, was further embarrassed by Gagarin's exploit.

As Gargain circled the globe, a crew at what was then Cape Canaveral, Fla., labored to launch Alan Shepard as the first American spaceman. On May 5, Shepard rode a Mercury capsule on a modest 15-minute mission that took him 115 miles high on a sub-orbital trip.

Twenty days later, President John F. Kennedy committed the U.S. to race Russia to the moon.

For many months the race was one-sided in favor of the Soviets and their big rockets. But slowly the U.S. forged ahead, moving from the Mercury to the Gemini to the Apollo programs.

The U.S. captured the moon prize July 20, 1969, when Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin became the first human beings to walk on lunar soil. Since then two additional astronaut teams have landed on the moon.

The Apollo program is to conclude after three more launchings — Apollo 15 next July and Apollos 16 and 17 next year. In 1973, the U.S. plans to launch a small space station named Skylab. It will be visited by three different three-man crews to conduct scientific, engineering and medical experiments for periods of up to 56 days.

After Skylab, the U.S. has no approved man-in-space project. The space agency had hoped to have a large space station in orbit in 1976, to be serviced from earth by a reflyable space shuttle that would operate much like an airliner, making 100 or more round trips. Both projects have been delayed at least three years, and could be cancelled if Congress fails to vote funds in the next fiscal year.

In 1966, there were 420,000 persons working on the U.S. space program. Today there are 128,000. Knowledgeable observers report Russia has about 600,000 persons working on space.

The same sources say Russia is spending about two per cent of its gross national product on space, compared with less than one-half of one per cent by the U.S.

Reformers Get Key Seats In Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Reformers jointly backed by the Socialist and Communist parties won the governor's seats, in Tokyo and Osaka—Japan's two largest prefectures—while Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's political allies retained their strength elsewhere in local elections Sunday.

The Socialist - Communist triumphs in Osaka and Tokyo were generally regarded as political setbacks for the 70-year-old Sato, who had campaigned in both prefectures for candidates supported by his Liberal Democratic party.

In Tokyo, Ryokichi Minobe, 67, a soft-spoken former economics professor, won a second-year term on a platform promising better living conditions in the world's largest city.

In Osaka, Ryoichi Kurado, 60, also a former university professor, upset Liberal-Democrat Gisen Sato, 70.

However, the premier's party won the governorships in Hokkaido, Chiba, Wakayama, Shimane and Kagoshima prefectures.

Of the 11 other governorships at stake, one went to a minor political party and the remaining 10 to independents. Eight of the independents are considered close to Sato's conservative camp and the other two adopt neutral policies.

ADVERTISERS SCORE B.C. MEDIA BAN

HAMILTON (CP) — The Canadian Advertising and Sales Association has condemned legislation in British Columbia to ban tobacco, beer and liquor advertising.

Meeting here Monday, the association adopted a resolution declaring its opposition to any legislation which undermines the free enterprise system or inhibits the use of the communications media by Canadian business.

Keith Jarrett, an association spokesman, said the citizens of B.C. and Canada had the right to make an intelligent choice of consumer goods.

ECM Said Threat To B.C. Plywood

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia says the future of B.C. plywood exports to Britain, worth $27.4 million last year, is in jeopardy if this prime export market moves into the European Economic Community.

Gordon L. Draeseke made the comment Monday in an interview on his return from talks in London, Brussels, Paris and other European capitals about terms of sale for B.C. plywood should Britain join the Common Market.

He said he suggested to the British negotiating team in Brussels that the United Kingdom should press for suspension of tariffs on plywood imports from Canada with no limits on the amounts shipped.

B.C. produces 95 per cent of Canada's softwood plywoods and Britain takes 70 per cent of the province's exports.

LOW TARIFF

The U.K. tariff is only five per cent while the Common Market levy is 13 per cent.

A second proposal discussed with both British-EEC representatives was for a duty-free quota restriction on the Canadian product.

Mr. Draeseke said the French were the most opposed to any generous concessions on plywood imports from B.C. In talks in Paris, he said the most that was offered was a duty-free quota to be progressively abolished over a five-year period.

France produces hardwood plywood from domestic logs and from lumber imported from former possessions in Africa. There is also a small French softwood plywood industry from pines grown on the Atlantic seaboard.

Mr. Draeseke said the B.C. sale of softwood plywood in no way conflicts with French interests.

RECIPROCAL FAVORS?

"But I suppose there is no real reason why they should want to grant us favors for nothing," he said.

"How do you go about fixing quotas in a market where, given a major selling pitch, we could sell so much more than we do at present?"

Total B.C. output of softwood plywood last year was 1.73 billion square feet. Exports accounted for 431 million square feet and Britain took 301 million square feet of that total.

A joint EEC and United Nations study shows that Western Europe as a whole had a shortfall on domestic production of 1.36 billion cubic feet of industrial timber in 1970.

This deficit is expected to grow to 2.36 billion cubic feet by 1980.

Shrimp Study Wins Award At Youth Fair

VANCOUVER (CP) — David Smith, a student at North Kamloops Senior Secondary School, won the trophy for the best exhibit at the British Columbia Youth Science Fair Monday.

His project, entitled "Oil Effects on the Metabolism of Fresh Water Shrimp" also received the trophy in the biology category and will be entered in the National Youth Fair in Edmonton May 10.

Judges from Simon Fraser University, University of B.C., B.C. Institute of Technology and the B.C. Science Teachers' Association awarded trophies in four other categories:

Chemistry—Douglas Wade of Sutherland Junior Secondary School in North Vancouver for "Preparation and Determination of Physical and Chemical Properties of Esters;"

'WEIGHT METER'

Electronics — Edward Cairns of Hugh McRoberts School in Richmond for "Electronic Tubes;"

Technical Design — Kevin D. Thompson of Cliff Drive Elementary School in Tsawwassen for "Weight Meter;"

Joint Project—Chris Dewhurst and Barrie Drain of West Vancouver Secondary for "Laser Transmission."

Winners in the chemistry, technical design and the joint project classes will also go to Edmonton for the national contest.

The science fair comprised exhibits by B.C. students from grades 7 to 12. It ends Wednesday at a downtown department store when other prizes of cash awards and microscopes will be awarded.

Aussies Easing Racist Policies

By IAN McCAUSLAND

CANBERRA (AP) — Australia's immigration policy is racist, by official admission. Yet this European-populated country at the foot of Asia has liberalized its policy toward non-white immigrants. Last year it absorbed 3,300 non-Europeans and 6,000 people of mixed descent.

Of the non-Europeans, almost half were Indians and a fourth Chinese. The others were Filipinos, Ceylonese, Pakistanis, Indonesians, Malays, Burmese, Japanese, Koreans, Fijians, Polynesians, Cambodians, Thais, West Indians, Tongans and one Sudanese.

The majority of Indians came directly from India and the Chinese from Hong Kong, Malaysia and Singapore. Anglo-Indians made up the largest group of the "mixed descent."

Generally, entry permits were given because these people had relatives in Australia or had some skill needed here. Physicians, engineers and teachers were dominant among professional migrants.

SITUATION CURIOUS

"It's a curious situation," said an immigration department official. "For the first time in 70 years the government is permitting a trickle of non-European migrants, and is meeting a flood of criticism.

"When the door was firmly shut—even padlocked—against non-whites, few people noticed. Now that the door is slightly ajar, people are noticing."

The door is unlikely to be opened farther. To Australia, open-door immigration is synonymous with floodgates bursting. But Australia has become home to 2.6 million immigrants since the Second World War.

Japanese companies have been pumping millions into mining development in Australia. Personnel coming in to keep an eye on the spending generally stay as long as they wish, though they have only permits for temporary residence. There have been few signs that many Japanese wish to settle in Australia, any more than Australians want to go to Japan.

Former prime minister John G. Gorton once said: "What we apply, and what almost every other country I can think of applies, is a rascist immigration policy."

SOME HYPOCRITICAL

This coincides with a view here that many countries are hypocritical in charges of racialism.

Some Africal countries refused permanent residence to non-Africans and deny them the right to work.

Basically the same thinking applies in Australia today as in the 1830s and 1840s when antagonism toward non-white workers started. At that time, businessmen imported Chinese coolies willing to work for low wages. In the 1850s, thousands of Chinese arrived in Australia in the wake of gold discoveries.

Apart from differences in language, religion, clothes and food, the immigrants refused to join other miners in campaigns for better conditions. The result was riots and heavy restrictions, though non-whites were not deported.

To Australians, the restrictions benefit was emphasized when the Japanese attacked this country in the Second World War.

A "populate or perish" theme was adopted after the war. Australia's first immigration minister, Arthur A. Caldwell, said:

"We have only the next 25 years to make the best possible use of our second chance to survive. Our first requirement is additional population. We need it for reasons of defence and for the fullest expansion of our economy."

The feeling was that a country of almost three million square miles needed many more than its then population of 6.6 million to defend it. But if a non-white applied for entry a "dictation test" could be invoked. Under this, an applicant could be tested in any European language.

The chances an Indian knew Gaelic was remote.

Canadian Planes Used For U.S. Firefighting

By LISA RINGLE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (CP) — Quebec Transport Minister Georges Tremblay begins a three-day visit with Oklahoma and Alabama state officials today concerning the operation of the CL-215 water bomber, built by Canadair Ltd. of Montreal.

Mr. Tremblay was to meet Gov. David Hall of Oklahoma today and Gov. George Wallace in Montgomery, Ala., Wednesday. He later will meet with government crews operating the twin-engine amphibious aircraft in the two southern states. After meeting Gov. Wallace, Mr. Tremblay will observe a demonstration of the aircraft's fire-fighting capabilities at Jasper, Ala.

A government official said the purpose of the visit was to discuss the operation of the aircraft. It was not a trade mission to sell the plane.

Canadair, which employs some 4,000 aircraft workers in Montreal, is owned by General Dynamics of the U.S.

Two of the CL-215s flew to the two states in early March at the request of state officials to assist in fire-fighting operations. A third water bomber, also on loan from the Quebec government, is operating in Tennessee.

FIRES BAD

The spokesman said that fires in Oklahoma have been particularly bad this year. The water bomber stationed in Oklahoma City up to April 8 has fought 39 fires and made 175 water drops amounting to a total of 252,000 U.S. gallons.

The CL-215 was brought to the U.S. last September to help fight disastrous brush fires in the Los Angeles foothills.

The plane, the first designed specifically to fight forest fires, is capable of skimming across a body of water and scooping up six tons of water in less than 20 seconds.

The Quebec government has taken delivery of nine of the aircraft with another six to be delivered by May. The French government has purchased 10 for its Service de Protection Civile. The Spanish government took delivery of two of the squat-looking aircraft last February.

PTA Trying to Shed Tea and Cookie Image

By BOB MITCHELL

The B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation is attempting to overcome its cookies and tea image by trying to get that ignored, ineffectual figure, the parent, into the thick of educational change.

The PTA, which is mainly a parent organization now hardly associated with teachers, and which has been on the skid for several years, has embarked on a project designed to help parents understand major issues in education and show them how to take action if they are dissatisfied with what's offered in schools.

During the current school year, three discussion groups consisting of interested parents and resource people were set up in Duncan, Vancouver and Burnaby.

•

The experience of these pilot groups will be used to establish similar groups in other parts of the province, says Mrs. Margaret Ennenberg, of Vancouver, a member of the Parent-Teacher Federation's Parent Education Project (PEP) committee.

PEP is based on the assumption that parents are interested in what's going on in the schools, but it also recognizes the traditional format of PTA meetings is no longer the best way to keep parents informed.

"It's very difficult to bring parents up to date with six PTA meetings a year," said Mrs. Ennenberg. "With PEP you're dealing with half a dozen people who are interested in education."

She said the PEP pilot groups "did a great deal to dispel the suspicion that exists between educator and layman."

They also made parents less critical of school boards because they began to understand the drawbacks trustees work under, she said.

Could PEP groups start a parent movement for community control of schools? Mrs. Ennenberg was asked.

•

"None of the pilot groups seemed to want community control in the sense of the experimental schools in the States where parents control the curriculum.

"They would like an opportunity to work with the school board and the educators to see that they are brought into the picture. Right now they're faced with a fait accompli."

Mrs. Ennenberg said in their discussions the pilot groups did not go so far as to identify provincial control over schools as the main source of education malaise. But the groups in future could have some decentralizing influence on the system, she said.

She'll be talking about the Parent Education Project at the annual Parent-Teacher Federation convention in New Westminster April 27-29.

Also at that convention will be organizational analyst Dr. Herman Wallin who has been hired by the federation to run a 900-questionnaire survey entitled Do Parents Really Want a Say in the Education of Their Children?

The questionaires, published in booklet form, sound out parents' feelings on what kind of problems parent organizations should deal with at the school, school district and provincial levels.

Some of the issues listed include goals and purposes of education, teacher hiring methods, adequacy of special services, the curriculum, construction costs, the total cost of education, policies on report cards, discipline and dismissal, and the quality of education.

Those filling out the questionnaires are asked if they would favor advisory committies, school auxiliaries or PTA councils studying some of those issues.

Closer to home, the Greater Victoria school board is creating a community advisory group which would draw on the widest possible range of people, including parents, students, teachers, principals and trustees.

•

An interesting sidelight to the whole trend of evaluating public opinion on education took place recently at Macaulay elementary when principal Hector Sutherland included a four-page questionnaire in the school newsletter.

A preliminary check of the answers indicated Esquamalt parents are chiefly concerned about a lack of discipline and large classes, Sutherland said. But in the United States the annual Gallup poll on education showed for the second consecutive year discipline alone is the major parental concern.

Four local PTA stalwarts who are concerned about the organization's tea-and-cookies image were interviewed as a group by the Times recently. The four included Eileen Byers, vice-president of the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation, Frances Thompson, former president of the BCPTF, Joan Guest, president of the Greater Victoria Parent-Teacher Council, and John Harris, president of the Monterey PTA.

•

Mrs. Thompson pointed out that despite the image, PTAs have been instrumental since they began in 1915 in starting up physical education programs, music and home economics courses. Conferences between teachers and parents to discuss a child's problems were initiated by the PTAs, and back in the days when teachers were considered underpaid, the PTAs supported better salaries.

"Now they don't like us because we don't side with them for higher wages," Mrs. Byers said.

The name "parent-teacher" in itself is an anomaly because the teachers, having formed their own group, the B.C. Teachers' Federation, now are considered the non-participating members of PTAs.

PTAs were originally formed to keep parents informed on what the schools were doing. However, in recent years attendance at meetings had dropped off considerably forcing several associations out of existence. BCPTF membership last year reached a low of 17,000.

"People won't accept the responsibility of citizenship," said Mrs. Thompson.

"The parents who attended the meetings were usually the ones whose children didn't need any help," Mrs. Byers added.

•

She said a PTA meeting will draw a good crowd if parents think what is to be discussed directly affects their child. But if the topic is something like drug education they tend to assume their child will not be affected, and therefore it is of no concern to them.

Another complaint about PTAs is that they often are forced into housekeeping roles for the schools and the school board. In the Greater Victoria school district, for example, when a school referendum is held, PTA members phone ratepayers to remind them to vote.

Sometimes they devote their enthusiasm to raising money to buy extras for the schools.

"If you had a principal who was a businessman and who wanted things, then he would have you raising money, so, sure, there were a lot of teas," Mrs. Thompson said.

"They want you sitting there, ready to do something when they need you," Mrs. Byers said.

Mrs. Guest said parents should not feel intimidated when they visit a school.

"When the day comes when the parent can go into the school and talk openly with the teacher, then the school will be a better environment for learning," she said.

•

It appears almost certain that if parents seriously intend to regain an effective voice in public education, parent organizations like PTAs will have to dispense with traditional structures and become community groups representing a cross-section of those concerned about education.

DOES THE TRUTH HURT?

Alderman Irked by Chamber Charge That Council Stalling Reid Project

The Chamber of Commerce should prove just where Victoria council has been dragging its feet, says Ald. Ove Witt.

Witt told council's B Committee today he takes "great exception" to statements made by Chamber members when they drafted a letter to council for a speedy start to construction of the Reid waterfront development.

The letter says the Chamber urges the city "in the strongest terms, to proceed quickly as possible" with the Reid development.

News reports of the meeting at which the letter was passed quoted chamber president Philip Holmes saying the project had been "shoved under the table" by council.

"I think they should be asked to tell us what city council has swept under the rug," said Witt. "I don't think they should say those things without backing them up."

Committee received and filed the letter, as Ald. Clyde Savage said to Witt: "I just want to ask you if the truth hurts."

Coast Trail Ignored

The $15 million B.C. parks summer work program provides for the development of 400 miles of trails in various provincial parks but doesn't include work on the west coast trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

Harold McWilliams, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said repairs to the trail had been left to the federal government as the coastal belt has been designated as part of the National West Coast park.

Last year trail work was carried out by students with federal and provincial funds.

Federal park officials at Long Beach said they don't know yet if funds had been set aside for work on the trail this summer.

It is estimated that about 2,000 hikers — men, woman and young people — used the trail last year.

MANY PEOPLE

John Page, vice-president of the Victoria Outdoor Club who led a party on the trail over the Easter weekend, said repairs should be carried out to some bridges as a safeguard for inexperienced hikers.

Page said he met many people on the trail — an indication that it will be much used during the summer months.

McWilliams said by June about 1,500 people will be employed in provincial parks.

The work program on Vancouver Island included development of 50 campsites at Gordon Bay, Lake Cowichan, he said. The camp has now 20 sites.

He said the Ralph River camp at Buttle Lake would also be enlarged by 50 camp sites.

"All provincial parks on the island will undergo some improvements and development," he said.

Parking Ban For Cricket

Car parking on the cricket field in Beacon Hill Park will be eliminated following a July cricket tournament, Victoria council's parks committee decided today.

The committee decided to proceed with passage of a bylaw restricting the parking, despite a request made by the Victoria and District Cricket Association to allow parking to continue.

Committee decided to allow parking on the field only for the tournament which begins July 4, since tournament organizers said parking was a necessary part of their arrangements.

Court Ruling On Juveniles Sticks Here

Seventeen-year-old offenders — the subject of recent B.C. Supreme Court rulings — will continue to be treated as adults in Victoria provincial court until their status before the courts is changed, a court official said today.

Senior prosecutor J. W. Anderson was commenting on a Vancouver lawyer's intention to appeal Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane's decision which said adult courts could judge 17-year olds.

Anderson said he viewed the status of 17-year-olds in adult court as "operative" following the Macfarlane decision and this could only be changed by an overruling in a higher court.

In Vancouver, lawyer Douglas Jolliff said he will appeal the ruling to the B.C. Appeal Court.

The Vancouver city prosecutor's office has decided to return to the practice of delaying hearings for 17-year-olds until the second appeal is over.

Jolliff last Jan. 29 won the support of Vancouver provincial court Judge John Anderson by claiming that a federal proclamation of October 1970 lowering the age of an adult in court to 17 was unconstitutional because it invaded a provincial field.

The case involved a 17-year-old charged with theft and possession of stolen property.

Following the Anderson decision all 17-year-olds who appeared in adult court were remanded pending last week's decision.

With the Macfarlane ruling, 17-year-old defendants—about 25 cases in the Greater Victoria area—began to move normally through court by the middle of last week.

There are numerous cases yet to appear.

Douglas Street Banners May Come Into Use Again

A convention-welcoming banner across Douglas Street was approved by council's B Committee today, possibly reviving a practice council had all but abolished.

If full council approves, the banner will go up May 13 to 15 to welcome the Lions Club Golden Anniversary convention.

Directional signs were also approved for placement on service poles.

Ald. Harold Olafson backed the welcoming banner, saying the city has "fouled it up already with commercial signs — one more sign won't hurt."

Ald. Clyde Savage, who eventually voted against the move, said he would go for it, "but you have to be prepared to allow all of them."

Olafson said any convention bringing more than 1,000 people to the city should be allowed to use a banner.

The banners have been eliminated except for a Community Chest banner and one other.

Mayor Courtney Haddock and Ald. Ove Witt backed Olafson, against Savage and Ald. Hugh Ramsay.

Haddock said he thought the banner would "add to the warmth of the city."

SOME WOMEN COME BACK FOR MORE ABORTIONS

The soaring number of therapeutic abortions undertaken at Royal Jubilee Hospital produce more than the problem of taxing staff and facilities.

Records show one woman had three such operations last year and another has had two this year and probably another last year. In both cases the women were unmarried.

There has been one case of a 13-year-old girl having an abortion and two or three cases involving 14 to 15-year-olds.

Dr. C. F. Ballam, medical director, said today it is practically impossible to be certain about the number of times some women have been aborted. They may have had the operation under both single and married names.

There were 147 therapeutic abortions conducted at the hospital last year and Ballam said patients fall into three general categories:

About 20 per cent are girls under 18, about 40 per cent are single girls in the 18 to late twenties age group. The other 40 per cent are married women who don't want to have their baby for a variety of reasons.

The doctors' committee which meets weekly to consider applications approved 18 last week. Twelve of the operations were conducted Saturday and the balance will be completed during this week.

Milk Price Hike Expected

Higher milk prices in Victoria are likely to be reflected by a raise granted to mainland dairy workers April 1.

Frank Norton, president of Northwestern Creamery, said increased costs in the dairy industry make higher retail prices inevitable.

He was commenting on a price hike forecast by George Okulitch, manager of Fraser Valley Milk Producers Association. Much of the milk consumed on Vancouver Island comes from the Fraser Valley.

Retail prices went up late last year after the dairy union was given a raise in April. Average increase was 1.4 cents a quart.

This year's union settlement cost the industry $1 million.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IT IS ALWAYS A PROfound nuisance to be sick on your own time, but the quickie flu that's going around is no respecter of holidays. As a result, I find myself ejected into another week with no trout fished for, no needful work done around our spring-smitten place, and a hope that the next long weekend will prove luckier.

Still, there were compensations. A flock of them came whipping along Haro Strait, low to the water in undulating flight, when Good Friday afternoon was verging on dusk.

The birds seemed large for ducks, but they vanished under the loom of the land before we could put the binoculars on them. We hoped they might be black brant. These sturdy little geese winter as far south as Mexico, and journey north along the coast each spring to Arctic nesting grounds.

Next morning I was all for going down to see if the transients had put in at our home cove. The suggestion fell flat. Much better if I stayed indoors: Win would take dog Lancer to the head of the beach stairs for his run, and report back on what she saw below.

"If there is one thing I detest, it is to to be housebound while others range free. I watched from the living room window until the beach trail swallowed black dog and red jacket, then settled down moodily to tie trout flies.

The visitors were brant, all right, Win told me when she got back. From the top of the stairs, she'd heard them gabbling, and guessed they were feeding along the tide edge.

Her plan was to go quietly down for a look at the visitors. But Lancer the lab had heard those busy voices too, and dashed past her to investigate.

The brant took wing, but they hadn't strung out in their travelling formation. Instead, they'd circled past the mouth of the cove and landed again in a compact flock.

She'd counted a dozen of the handsome black and white birds. Perhaps they'd stay for a while, as brant often do when they find a spot to their liking.

By this time I wanted badly to see those little geese that winter south and build down-lined nests up near the top of the continent. The springtime, in fact, wouldn't be quite complete without at least a glimpse of them.

I said as much to Win, who listened indulgently, then insisted on giving me some cough medicine.

"Even if they don't stay," she said, "there will be others."

On Saturday morning, she set off for the beach again with Lancer. I moped around the house until she returned.

"You know the Pacific loon?" Win said. "Well, I think he or she has a mate. They were chasing each other around the cove . . . it was something to see. Some more buffleheads have come in, too."

"What about the brant?" I asked her.

"Well," she said, "without the glasses, I couldn't be sure. But I saw what could have been a couple of brant a long way out."

"Probably seagulls," I told her ungraciously, mourning a spectacle missed that mightn't be repeated.

The chances were that the flock had taken off purposefully in the dawn's early light. The birds would be boring along other straits and channels, to feed on eel grass farther north.

I felt pretty disappointed about those brant. But at least, the bug that had altered the course of our holiday appeared to be relaxing its grip.

In Easter Sunday sunshine, we headed for the cove together. Lancer, his excess energy run off on wildland scents, tagged decorously after us down the beach stairs. The gabble of many voices rose to meet us.

Another flock of brant, or perhaps the same one considerably added to, had put in for rest and refreshment. The little geese of springtime had gathered in the weedy angle of low-tide beach and rock point. White necklaces showed on black necks. White rumps caught the sunlight.

We watched them from a stair landing for a while, then went on down.

The brant showed no undue alarm. They merely paddled into the cove and cruised along its rim toward the farther point. We counted them — 25 fine waterfowl, bound north in convoy by unhurried stages.

They may linger a while longer, or even now they may be flying strong-winged on course.

Either way, it was good medicine to hear them and to see them.

REAY WELCOMES LAYOFF . . .

. . . STANLEY CUP SERIES RESUME TONIGHT

While Others Busy, Hawks Can Think About Last Year

By The Canadian Press

Billy Reay doesn't foresee his Chicago Black Hawks pulling a repeat of last year's Stanley Cup semi-final when they went out in four straight to Boston Bruins.

The Hawks earned an early rest this year by sweeping past Philadelphia Flyers in their quarter-final series in four games.

It could be next Tuesday before the Hawks return to the hockey wars as they await the winner of the Toronto Maple Leaf-New York Ranger series, now deadlocked at two games each.

The Toronto-New York best-of-seven set resumes tonight at New York with a sixth game in Toronto Thursday.

The other two quarter-final series, also tied at two games each, continue tonight at Boston and St. Louis where the Bruins meet Montreal Canadiens and the Blues entertain Minnesota North Stars.

The Black Hawks, after winning the National Hockey League's East Division title last year, knocked off Detroit Red Wings in four straight before encountering Boston in the semi-final.

The Bruins went on to win the Stanley Cup for the first time in 29 years and are odds-on favorites to repeat this season.

This year the Black Hawks moved to the West Division under NHL realignment and were easy schedule winners. They had little trouble getting past Philadelphia in the quarter-final.

"We won't have any letdown like that this year, I'm sure," said Reay Monday after announcing the team will resume workouts in Chicago Wednesday.

"They guys learned their lesson pretty well last year and besides, last year's series with the Red Wings did a lot more to drain the players' emotions than this series did.

"I relish the layoff this year," he continued. "We've got a couple of guys who will benefit from it, . . . Jim Pappin and Keith Magnuson particularly. Both have knee troubles."

Reay said the Black Hawks have done everything expected of them this season "and it's going to continue that way."

The Leafs and Rangers, meanwhile, return to the arena where they finished the second game of their series in a wild, bench-clearing donnybrook.

NHL president Clarence Campbell could deal with the matter of fines sometime today with the Leafs expected to shoulder the bulk to the load because of three bench-clearing incidents earlier in the season.

Goalies Ed Giacomin of New York and Bernie Parent and Jacques Plante of Toronto are expected to be fingered for getting involved in the melee and Ranger winger Vic Hadfield, one of the featured combatants, was labelled the villain who threw Parent's mask into the crowd. It was never returned.

Campbell, who viewed films of the game, said the mask-throwing incident wasn't on camera but Hadfield has admitted the misdemeanor which could cost him more in fines.

Hadfield said in Toronto Sunday night after Rangers downed Toronto 4-2 to even their series he doubts there'll be a recurrent of the ill feeling that developed from the two early games at New York.

"Both teams were feeling each other out," said Hadfield. "Now I expect they'll stick to the basic fundamentals of the game."

At Boston, the Bruins appear to have recovered the form that made them runaway leaders in the East during the regular season. But they have yet to solve the heroics of Ken Dryden, Montreal's rookie goaltender who more than anyone else has been responsible for Canadiens being on even terms.

"Incredible," was Boston veteran John Bucyk's reaction after facing the former Cornell University star. "For a big man, he's got unbelievable reflexes.

"Trying to jam one past Dryden is like trying to walk between two streetcars," said Bucyk of the six-foot-four Toronto native who played in only six NHL games this year before being called on to face the Bruins in the playoffs.

Boston coach Tom Johnson sys he'll stick with Gerry Cheevers in goal rather than risk another chance on veteran Ed Johnston. Johnston was in goal for the second series game when Montreal, trailing 5-1, rebounded with six straight goals and a 7-5 win.

The Minnesota-St. Louis quarter-final gives every indication of going the full seven games if the defences and goaltending for both teams holds up.

Every game in the series has been a low-scoring affair and the North Stars, who evened the set Sunday with a 2-1 home-ice win, got help from an unexpected source.

Veteran Bobby Rousseau, who scored only four goals all season, and Charlie Burns whose main forte is checking, notched the Minnesota goals.

Rousseaus' goal, which tied the score 1-1, ended a Minnesota scoring drought of 112 minutes. The rugged series has knocked three players to the sidelines, but St. Louis defenceman Carl Brewer is expected to return for tonight's game.

Still out will be Blues' Bill Sutherland and Minnesota's high-scoring Bill Goldsworthy.

BILL WALKER

What was a nice, 23-year-old boy who had become the idol of thousands of hockey fans doing, pushing a National Hockey League linesman around? Had the pressures of playoff competition finally got to hockey's super-star? Was he just an ordinary performer, after all, when it came to having respect for authority. Was he given to temper tantrums when things weren't going his way? If so, his lot was not an unusual one. It was just that the name didn't appear to fit the crime.

It was more surprise and amazement that Boston's Bobby Orr acted in the manner he did. He erupted in a fit of pique when he was given a misconduct penalty for disputing a holding call by referee John Ashley. He jumped out of the penalty box and was seeking out Ashley when he was deterred by linesman Ron Ego. It was then that he pushed Ego. Ashley didn't see the shove, fortunately, or a stiffer sentence to Orr would have resulted. Ego, for his part, said later it wasn't really that hard a shove that it deserved a report to the league president. In other words, he had received harder.

But even if it was the "don't bothem me, boy" type of outburst, it still may have shrunken Orr's halo a little. Suddenly, he wasn't the All-Canadian boy any more. He was, if only for a few rare moments, a spoiled brat who hadn't really grown up yet.

Of course this is part of the price that must be paid for super-star stature. Usually, everything is magnified and often blown out of all porportion. There was even the suggestion that had a player of lesser status been involved, the penalty would have been more severe. This will always be in dispute. Because Orr did so push the linesman, and was difficult to restrain as well. Even by his teammates. If anything saved him from further penalty, it was Ego's testimony. He wasn't hurt by Orr.

In fairness, it should be pointed out that in Orr's previous track record, there was no indication that he was given to regular outbreaks of such annoyance. He doesn't have the reputation of being a sorehead. And if he bristled at Ashley for the holding call he had received, perhaps he felt a complaint was justified.

Actually it wasn't that Ashley misinterpreted Orr's remarks which obviously led to the misconduct. Far from it. Orr just carried on the conversation too long, and possibly too loudly. Ashley had heard enough, thank you.

About this sort of thing, Whitey Severson had an interesting explanation, if from afar. Severson, who has had much experience here both as a player and an official in the realm of box lacrosse, knew what it was all about. As a player, he often had his say. As an official, he has had to listen. He understood both positions.

As Severson explained, when a player gets a penalty he feels is not deserved, he has to blow off. He does it by telling the official the injustice of it all. "Sure, the language is rough," Severson went on, "but usually you let him have his say, and that happens as the both of you approach the penalty box.

"That part of it is fine," Severson went on, "but when the player continues, and keeps up the foul language, in front of the box, and the fans, then he's gone. There's no way an official will be shown up by a player."

Ask any lacrosse player or hockey player. They'll tell basically the same story. If they don't like the call, they can have their beef, if they keep it short, and don't involve the referee's family, either.

The language at ice level isn't the best at any time, and it's a wonder that the officials don't crack down more than they do. Often they have every right to. It is to their everlasting credit that they keep their cool as well as they do. Because actually they are subject to the same stresses and strains as are the players. Perhaps more so.

It is baffling for instance how linesmen can get so deeply involved in those multi-player brawls and come out of it with nothing more than a mussed hair-do. If that is what the league pays them to do, they do their job well.

●

As to Orr, sure, he showed up Ashley, or was attempting to do so when he was found out. And if he displayed an utter lack of respect for the linesman he shoved, which he did, then perhaps he also deserved a more severe penalty. And if this one petty outburst of bad temper has lowered him in the eyes of some, there is ample reason for that opinion too.

But then it could be just one life's many contradictions. It may be, for Orr, an unlikely switch that won't occur again. That's what his many fans would rather believe. For Boston's curly-headed No. 4 has all the ability in the world, and is a treat to watch too.

Sunday in Montreal, when the Bruins were in trouble and trailing the Canadiens two games to one, the question was put:

"Will the real Bobby Orr please stand up?"

He did, and scored three goals.

Only the Twins Able to Enjoy 'Dutch Treat'

By The Associated Press

Kansas City Royals became the latest victim of Bert Blyleven, Minnesota Twins' 20-year-old pitching ace, in American League play Monday.

Blyleven tossed a three-hitter at the Royals en route to a 2-0 victory for his second consecutive shutout.

Last week, he blanked Milwaukee Brewers on four hits.

The victory, coupled with Milwaukee's 5-0 loss to Oakland Athletics, put the Twins atop the American League West by a half game in their quest for a third straight championship. Elsewhere, Boston Red Sox outlasted Washington Senators 10-7 and California Angels nipped Chicago White Sox 3-2

Willie Stargell, held hitless in five previous appearances at the plate, rapped a pitch he wasn't supposed to go after for a single to knock in the game-winning run in the 11th inning and give Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 National League win over Philadelphia Phillies.

PERFECT PITCH

Stargell, who had missed a homer by a foot in the ninth inning, worked the count to 2-2 against Phillie reliever Dick Selma in the 11th. Next came a perfect pitch.

"I was jammed," said Stargell.

"I got the pitch where I wanted it," said Selma.

Still, Stargell drilled it for the single that scored Dave Cash with Pittsburgh's winning run.

Elsewhere in the National, Cincinnati Reds won their first game, belting Atlanta Braves 7-3 with four home runs, San Francisco Giants shut out San Diego Padres 5-0, St. Louis Cardinals clipped Houston Astros 5-4 and Los Angeles Dodgers topped Chicago Cubs 4-3.

Blyleven became the youngest player in the majors when he joined the pitching-short Twins last June. The first batter to face him hit a home run but he won the game and finished with a 10-8 record and 3.18 earned run average

HAS MORE CONTROL

"I have more control," the Dutch-born hurler said after spoiling the Royals' home debut before a record crowd of 32,728, including Satchel Paige, a native son, who threw out the first ball.

The Twins scored off Dick Drago in the second inning on Harmon Killebrew's double and Jim Holt's single and got their second run in the seventh when Cesar Tovar doubled and Rod Carew singled.

"He's going to be a great pitcher," said Twins' manager Bill Rigney. "He has the ability, works hard and there's no limits to the heights he can reach."

The Red Sox, who had lost three in a row, erupted for six runs in the seventh inning, three more in the eighth and held on despite a five-run Washington counter rally in the last of the ninth.

Young Bowlers Win Top Prize

Young arms and legs proved more than capable against tournament-toughened veterans during the eighth annual Vancouver Island tenpin bowlspiel which came to an end Monday at Mayfair Lanes.

Eric Fisher, Toni Rhind, Darrel Aune and Ken Grexton, whose average age is 19 years, combined to push the A. J. Barr team to top honors by defeating Maplewood Farms in the final of the Colonist event.

While A. J. Barr ran an unbeaten streak through seven games to pick up top prize of $500, Flintstones were scoring a come-from-behind 37-pin win over Port Alberni's T Plus Three in the secondary Mayfair event.

Monday Bridge Club nipped Fuddle Duddles by six pins to capture the third Gar's Trophies event.

INDIVIDUAL STARS

In addition to bowlers that shared in the $2,160 awarded to team winners, four keglers earned trophies for individual performances.

Mo King rolled the high women's series of 567 while Lorna Pollock topped distaff singles with a 236 game.

Arvid Eli rolled the top men's series of 670 while Bill Lewis received the high single trophy for his 253 game.

Under tournament rules only those bowlers that have not won another prize may collect an individual trophy.

MADIGAN SLAPPED WITH INDEFINITE SUSPENSION

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Connie Madigan, a key member of the Portland Buckaroo defence, was suspended indefinitely late Monday by the Western Hockey League for knocking referee Dave Newell unconscious with a punch in the mouth in a playoff game Sunday night.

WHL president Eugene Kinasewich announced the suspension and said Madigan also was fined $500.

Defenceman Rick Foley of the Bucks was suspended for two games for tossing his stick in Newell's direction moments before the Madigan incident. He was fined $400.

Madigan was ejected from the game in the third period after being given his second 10-minute misconduct penalty of the night.

San Diego Gulls led, 4-2, at the time but Portland came back to tie, 4-4, in regulation play. Earl Heiskala won it for the Gulls in overtime.

Newell, who fell unconscious from Madigan's blow before the crowd of 8743, was reported in good condition.

Als' Back Surprised To Hear He's Signed

MONTREAL (CP) — Running back Moses Denson denied late Monday a statement by the Montreal Alouettes that he has signed a long-term contract with the defending Grey Cup champions

The Alouettes announced earlier in the night that Denson was among four players to sign contracts with the Eastern Football Conference club, but Denson said later that it's news to him.

What are they trying to do?" asked Denson. "I'll tell you this much. They don't have my signature on a contract as yet.

"The last time we talked, I told them some conditions they would have to meet for me to sign a contract. But we haven't even discussed the matter since.

"I can't imagine what all this means, unless it means they have decided to meet my terms.

"Still, wouldn't you think they would let me know before they make an announcement?"

The Alouettes announced that Denson, offensive tackle Ed George and defensive ends Steve Smear and Steve Booras have come to terms with the club.

All four players were EFC all stars and Smear was an all-Canadian.

No comment was available from the Alouettes' front offiee on Denson's remarks.

Hill Comeback Produces Win

THRUXTON, ENGLAND (AP) — Graham Hill of Britain, at 42 the oldest man in auto racing, won the final of the International Formula Two event Monday, outclassing a field of drivers from 12 nations.

Hill had the holiday crowd of 40,000 on its toes as he flashed to the finish of the 118-mile race in his Brabham.

It was Hill's first big race victory since he smashed both legs in the United States Grand Prix at Watkins Glen, N.Y., in October, 1969.

After that crash doctors predicted he would never race again.

Hill proved them wrong. He came with a flourish today and won by two lengths over second-place Ronnie Peterson of Sweden in March. Hill won in one hour two minutes 36.2 seconds for an average time of 113 miles an hour.

Penticton Powered By Donaldson's Pair

RED DEER, Alta. (CP) — Penticton Broncos forced a seventh and final game in their best-of-seven Centennial Cup Rustlers Monday with a 5-4 decision.

Penticton's victory tied the series 3-3. A winner will be chosen tonight when the two teams meet here for their final match.

The win came with two unanswered goals in the third period by Penticton's Gary Donaldson who boosted Broncos from a 4-3 deficit.

It was the second time in the game the Broncos overcame a deficit.

Bruce Affleck, Tom Gawryletz and Fred Parent scored the other Penticton goals.

Red Deer took eight of 13 minor penalties.

Esposito Favored by Hockey Voters

(Times News Services)

Phil Esposito, Boston centre, Toronto Maple Leafs' coach John McLellan and Chicago Black Hawks' president Bill Wirtz have been named the National Hockey League's top personalities by the publication Hockey News.

Esposito was named player of the year, McLelland the top coach and Wirtz was singled out as the top executive.

Earlier, Esposito was named to the publication's all-star team along with teammates Bobby Orr, Ken Hodge and Johnny Bucyk. Goalie Ed Giacomin and defenceman Brad Park, both of New York, were the only non-Bruins to make the first team.

Esposito also was voted the most valuable player and Buffalo Sabre centre Gilles Perreault was selected "rookie-of-the-year."

San Diego Gulls and Portland Buckaroos each placed two players on the Western Hockey League's all-star team. Goalie Jack McCartan and forward Bob Courcy were the Gulls selected while Portland placed centre Art Jones and Rick Foley on the first squad.

Andre Hinse of Phoenix and John Hanna of Seattle rounded out the team.

Making up the second team were Jim McLeod, Connie Madigan, Bill Saunders and Andy Hebenton, all of Portland; Gerry Goyer of San Diego and Larry Mavety of Denver Spurs.

There is heartening news for five-pin bowlers in Western Canada who have had trouble knocking down the counter pin.

The Western Canada Five-in Association has decided to abolish the rule which gave a bowler a zero, better known as a "blow," if the counter pin remained standing after three balls had been thrown.

In future, bowlers will be allowed to count the fallen pins.

The vote was close and ended a controversy of several years. Eastern Canada has been operating under the "no blow" rule and refused to compete against Western Canada until the West followed suit. The change probably means the resumption of a national five-pin championship.

The Gaelic Athletic Association, a pillar of Irish republicanism, has bowed to years of criticism and scrapped its rule that members must not play or even watch such "foreign games" as soccer, field hockey or rugby.

The vote at the association's annual convention in Beliast was unanimous by the 35 county boards — 26 in Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic and six in England.

The ban on "foreign games" and dances dated from the turn of the century, when the association was closely connected with the Irish independence movement.

Entries rolled in slowly, at first, but a final rush produced an overflow and the 22nd annual Times Island Open tournament is again assured of starting with a full field.

High handicapped players will be the first to be disappointed when the draw will be made tonight.

The 18-hole qualifying round will be played next Sunday at Oak Bay and will be limited to 160 starters, with preference given to the low handicaps.

With professionals Bill Wakeham, Norm Boden, Vaughan Trapp and defending champions Earl Davies "in," it will be a classy field. The list of challengers also includes virtually all of the best amateurs on the Lower Island, headed by defending B.C. Amateur champion Carl Schwantje and former provincial medallist Dave Mick.

While hubby Jack was busy trying to pick up his fourth Masters championship at Augusta, Barbara Nicklaus informed reporters her nine-year-old son is showing signs of following in the footsteps of his famous father.

Young Jack, Jr., scored a 50 for nine holes earlier in the week. The youngster had his card properly attested, then brought it home to show it off.

After Mrs. Nicklaus offered appropriate praise, the nine-year-old commented:

"All these years of practice finally paid off."

Mainland players took their final licks at qualifying for the match-play battles in the Vancouver City tournament, but they had a hard time mastering the Seymour course and the weather.

Wet conditions led to difficult putting situations. Every heel mark stayed for the day. As a result, late starters would have enjoyed greater success putting on a gravel road.

Only one player, Shaughnessy assistant Ron Wood, broke par with a 71 Sunday. Co-medallists Bob Cox and Ron Willey both carded final-round 73s to finish the 36-hole trials with 146.

The major casualties included Quilchena pro Al Kennedy and former Victorians Art and Dave Donaldson. They missed the cutoff of 152.

Three other ex-Victoria players made the grade. Point Grey pro Dick Munn and aide Mike Graas both closed with 78s for 151 totals and amateur Bob Plommer just made it with 152.

As in the Island Open, 32 qualify.

The trouble-plagued National Airlines Open — a $200,000 bomb — has been dropped.

Just 11 days after Gary Player's victory, National Airlines announced it will discontinue sponsorship of the Miami tournament.

"The tournament never got up any momentum," said Walt Robshaw speaking for the airline.

The first NAL tournament in 1969 was plagued by an entire week of rain, and striking mechanics picked the golf course during the final round.

This year's tournament had "no morale problems other than smog and the shortening of the pro-am contest by nine holes," Robshaw said.

"But that 8,000 crowd count is nowhere near the equivalent of the 40,000 fans who turned out last Sunday for the Greensboro Open," he said.

If the entry list is a yardstick for measuring interest, the annual Empress Hotel tournament hit an all-time low last year with less than 50 entries.

The "slump" was caused by a combination of factors, but the influencing ones were a change in format and the by-passing of Victoria Golf Club, the usual site, in favor of Uplands and Colwood.

Without meaning to offend Uplands and Colwood, it is apparent that the visitors have a preference for the Oak Bay course. Golfers from the Inland Territories just love to see that water all around them.

The tournament goes back to Oak Bay next week, and, at last count, Empress officials had 102 entries on hand.

The format has changed again, but it's not back to the original match-play theme. Instead, it will be 54 holes of medal play, and that seems more satisfactory than last year's rather confusing arrangements.

Ingraham Claims McGinnis Throne

Two goals in the final 37 seconds of the game gave Ingraham Buckaroos a 4-2 victory over Empress Paint and the Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League playoff championship Monday night at Memorial Arena.

The victory came in the deciding game of a best-of-five final for the Stuffy McGinnis Memorial Trophy.

Empress Paint, winners of the Humber Brothers Trophy as league champions this season and winners of both trophies last season, appeared to be destined for victory again after taking a 2-1 lead at 4:35 of the third period.

Ernie Carley, however, tied the score for Buckaroos at 17:35, Ken Waet scored what turned out to be the winning goal at 19:23 and Tom Allen added an insurance marker 18 seconds later.

Waet also scored the opening goal of the match at 15:03 of the second period only to see Fed Moulson tie it up 1-1 for the defending champions at 17:41 of the same frame.

Ross Joyal scored to give Empress its temporary lead in the third period.

Ron Griffis parried 26 shots in the Buckaroos' net while Ron Toffee made 35 saves for Paints; including 12 in the second period and 13 in the third as the pace quickened toward the end.

Draw Boosts Arsenal Hopes

LONDON (CP) — Leeds United, in a neck-and-neck struggle with Arsenal for the English First Division soccer championship, was held to a scoreless draw by Huddersfield Town Monday night.

The draw left Leeds with 58 points, four more than Arsenal which has played three less games. The outcome of the championship could well be decided when the two rivals meet at Leeds April 26.

Arsenal, which meets Nottingham Forest today, already has qualified for the English Football Association Cup final against Liverpool on May 8. If Arsenal can catch Leeds, it could become only the second team this century to capture both the league and cup titles, a feat achieved by Tottenham Hotspur in 1961.

In other action Monday, Blackpool, promoted only last season, was sent plunging back into the Second Division when it was held to a scoreless tie by Tottenham.

TEAM DOOMED

With only 18 points from 37 games, Blackpool was doomed to relegation when Ipswich defeated West Bromwich Albion, 1-0.

The Easter Monday program brought further injury troubles to Manchester City, which next week continues a bid to retain the European Cup Winners Cup in a game against Chelsea.

THREE HURT

City did well to get a goalless tie with Newcastle United, but the Manchester side's alarming list of injuries increased when Colin Bell, Mike Doye and Joe Corrigan were hurt.

Chelsea, 1-0 winner over below-strength Liverpool, moved back into third place in the First Division at the expense of Wolverhampton Wanderers, who lost, 1-0, away to Manchester United.

Everton, last season's champion, ended a run of eight games without a victory by beating Coventry City, 3-0. England prospect Joe Royle scored two goals.

Jockey Club Eyes Off-Track Betting

TORONTO (CP) — The Jockey Club Ltd. may soon introduce its own version of off-track betting facilities, a Jockey Club official said Monday.

"It's an interesting concept and we're giving it considerable thought," said John J. Mooney, executive vice-president and managing director of the Jockey Club which runs five Ontario tracks.

The system, similar to one proposed by the Western Canada Racing Association in Alberta last month, would, for example, enable Buffalo-area fans to bet at the Fort Erie track on race meets being conducted at the club's two Toronto tracks—Woodbine and Greenwood.

The Mohawk track at Campbellville or Garden City track at St. Catharines could also be utilized when the standardbreds are racing at Greenwood.

Horse players could use the dining or cocktail facilities at tracks not in operation and watch the races over a closed-circuit television hookup after placing their bets at Jockey Club mutuel machines.

Mooney said the proposal for increasing betting totals at Jockey Club tracks is not new. The idea was advanced to the federal department of agriculture "about seven or eight years ago . . . and we were turned down."

Mooney said he has applied again to the agriculture department but has yet to receive a reply.

"They're studying the proposal. In the meanwhile, we're examining at from numerous angles."

Bruins' Bubble Finally Breaks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Centennials blanked Chilliwack Bruins 5-0 Monday night, taking a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven British Columbia Junior Hockey League semi-final and perhaps bursting the Chilliwack playoff bubble.

The Bruins, who came out of the coast division cellar to eliminate first-place Victoria Cougars in a quarter-final and at one time led Vancouver 2-1 in games, could be eliminated when the teams meet Wednesday night in Chilliwack.

A crowd of 2,805 saw a cautiously-played game which was 1-0 for Vancouver at the end of the first period and 2-0 after the second.

The Centennials broke the game open in the third as Gord Stewart, Tom Rielly and Keith Nordin scored.

Bob Lewis had scored in the first and Grant Casper added one in the second. Casper also picked up three assists for the night.

Lionel Trudell of Vancouver stopped 28 shots for the shutout while Lee Hoium of Chilliwack made 31 saves.

The game was marred at the final whistle when both teams left their benches for an all-out donnybrook that was finally brought under control when the ice lights were turned off.

It is not known what action may be taken against the players or teams

Parents Blamed In Youth Problem

SIDNEY —Parents must assume more responsibility in organizing their youngsters leisure time, says Eleanor Sowerby, secretary of the Sidney recreation commission.

Referring to the "difficult youth situation" in Sidney, Mrs. Sowerby said she is surprised by the apparent lack of interest on the part of some parents in escorting their children to shows and sports events.

"Too many are left to wander about alone," she said.

FILL GAP

The commission is taking steps to fill an acknowledged gap in organized activity for junior high schoolers by setting up a leadership course in May.

Wayne Coulson, recreation commission member, is organizing the course which will encourage teen-agers to assume responsibility, learn how to handle group situations and teach gymnasium games.

Some of the graduates of this two-hour weekly course will supervise summer playground programs.

The new provincial grant structure provides a greatly expanded special aid program for clinics, workshops and research surveys.

Mrs. Sowerby says the commission will apply for funds to send out a 10-page survey on activity preferences for the whole family which will be a guide to recreation development here

Commission members Peter Grant and Al Knudsen are organizing the questionaire, to be circulated within a month.

The new grant structure also pays part of the salary of a qualified recreation director and Sidney Recreation Commission will recommend hiring one

TEEN DANCES

SIDNEY — Sidney recreation commission will give local teen-agers a chance to arrange their own dances with commission sponsorship.

Last month Sanscha community centre directors vetoed youth dances because of bad behavior.

After listening to Gene Jackson, president of Sidney Youth Council, recreation chairman Harry Tobin said he was willing to "give youth dances a whirl."

Jackson told the commission the youth council had now dwindled to a handful of teen-agers because of problems and lack of meeting space.

"Gene has given an excellent review of the teen-age situation here," said Tobin. "We know there are difficulties but if the kids themselves show enough interest in arranging dances, we will sponsor them!"

Jackson advocated more parental involvement and was hopeful the teens themselves could improve the standard of behavior.

Ald. Norma Sealey, recreation commission member, will work with the youth council on a dance program.

Socreds Back National Party

Thirty-five members attended a special joint meeting of the Social Credit associations of Saanich and the Islands and Esquimalt Monday and voted unanimous support of the move for a national party.

Stockwell Day, president of the Esquimalt constituency, who attended the April 3 and 4 Ottawa convention where the move to return to a national party was made, said he was moved at the strong unity shown by French-and-English-speaking party members.

He said it was planned to have a Socred candidate representing all 265 ridings in the next federal election, which most members believe will be held next year.

William Crabb of Victoria, who also attended the convention, said he had visited "hundreds of Frenchmen" in Quebec and that "they're all fed up with Trudeau."

Creditiste leader Real Caouette, who will seek leadership of the Social Credit Party of Canada at a national convention in Ottawa, July 2 and 3 will be in Vancouver April 24 to address a B.C. national convention.

Day told the meeting Monday: "I think when you listen to him the flame will be lit again. The fight will be on and it's going to be a wonderful fight. And don't ask me what the odds are because I don't give a damn about odds."

Interviewed later he admitted there was no thought of beating the Liberals in the next election but that the presentation of "a fresh alternative" would set the stage for a later Social Credit victory.

He also said that although it was the "stated ambition" to field 265 candidates in the next election he would expect to see more than 225 candidates declared.

MLAs John Tisdalle, Saanich and the Islands, and Herb Bruch, Esquimalt, also addressed the meeting.

Art Recovered

MANTUA, Italy (AP) — Police have recovered a stolen 15th-Century painting valued at an estimated $240,000. Two residents of the Venice suburb of Mestre have been arrested and charged with possessing stolen art. The painting, an altar piece depicting the Virgin Mary and Child, by Gian Battista Cima of Conegliano, was taken from a church in Padua April 3.

He maintained a kennel, breeding west Highland white and Scottish terriers and was in great demand as a judge for shows on the coast.

He served as bookkeeper with the real estate company of P. R. Brown for 40 years.

New Stability in China Evidenced by Fate of Liu Shao-Chi

By JOHN RODERICK

PEKING (AP) — Liu Shao-chi is alive, but his spirit is dead. That is the reply I got when I asked the fate of the former president of the People's Republic of China.

The white-haired Liu was the storm centre of the three-year Cultural Revolution. Condemned as a revisionist, a running dog of U.S. imperialism and worse—if anything could be worse—Liu finally was stripped of all his posts, labelled a scab and a renegade and disappeared from public view.

Liu is officially dead, a non-person, as far as the Chinese are concerned. They were a bit astonished when asked about him, but answered readily enough that everyone knew Liu was alive. They added that he probably was being re-educated, meaning punished and brain-washed.

From what I have been able to see in two days in China, the fall of Liu and the success of the Cultural Revolution have been followed by almost unprecedented relaxation generally as the national rebuilds itself politically and physically.

The Cultural Revolution was a period of struggle, tension and confrontation.

Westerns living in Peking say they noticed the faint stirrings of change 18 months ago, and a dramatic improvement only six months back. Some travel restrictions on the diplomatic corps were lifted, conducted expeditions to various parts of the country started and an over-all attitude of friendliness developed.

Certainly, neither Peking nor Canton now are what they were during the Cultural Revolution—cauldrons of intense political activity and the scene of public rallies of criticism of the wayward.

There are fewer wall posters and newspapers.

The invitations to 15 members of the U.S. table tennis team and three American correspondents to visit China was the final confirmation that the country has regained not only stability but a sense of confidence in itself.

RESEMBLES YENAN

The mood is remarkably like what it was in Yenan, the wartime Chinese Communist capital when I lived there as a reporter 25 years ago. The Communists we have met have been even franker and more outspoken than the men in Yenan were. The friendliness is the same.

The Chinese not only have extended a warm and apparently genuine welcome to the American visitors, but have gone farther and invited criticisms of what they are doing.

They have been apologetic about the lack of some facilities but helpful in getting things done. And everywhere there has been spontaneous friendliness from everyone, whether it be a peasant or a soldier.

Crash Kills Truck Driver

HIXON, B.C. (CP)—A truck driver was killed Monday in a head-on crash with a car on Highway 97 five miles north of this northern British Columbia community situated midway between Quesnel and Prince George.

One of three persons in the car was taken to hospital.

The truck driver was alone in his vehicle at the time of the mishap.

Names were withheld.

QUITS AS PASTOR

NEW YORK (AP) — Adam Clayton Powell, the former long-time congressman whose original public platform was the Abyssinian Baptist church in Harlem, announced Easter Sunday that he was resigning as pastor of the church. Powell, 62, took over the pulpit from his father in 1937. He told the 2,500 persons attending services that he would make Bimini, in the Bahamas, his permanent home.

A Poet Who Read His Way Out of the Slums

James: 'Capacity to Control My Life'
—Donna Clements Photo.

By DONNA CLEMENTS

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Robert James has risen from an uneducated boy of the slums to a poet of note.

As a boy, when he first started writing prose and poetry, James was concerned about how slums can kill "unconciouaness" in people.

Now, as a man of 34 living at Shawnigan Lake, he concentrates on writing practical philosophy.

Although he has now read beyond most university requirements, James feels his ability stems from the numerous jobs he has worked at and the many cities across Canada, the States and Mexico he has lived in.

●

As a youth in the Montreal slums where he was the third oldest of a family of 10 James said he can always remember reading.

"I don't remember learning," he said. "I went to the second year of grade school and then went out to work."

James said in these early years he experienced a lot of conflict in an ignorant happy way." His favorite pastimes wer to run, smash a ball against a wall and reading.

At this time he was writing prose and poetry but destroying it.

●

James feels his reading helped him rise above the slums because he was able to compare slums in books to his surroundings.

James then quoted Ralph Waldo Emerson who said "the fruit is in the seed."

"I have always realized that I have the capacity to control my life or circumstances and I am responsible for everything that has ever been generated to me."

●

James worked delivering newspapers and as a clean-up boy in a cigar book store before he left home at 12. After that some of his jobs included gas station attendant, owner of women's health clubs, manager of a hotel and public relations.

Although he was writing poetry throughout those experiences, James never considered having his works made known until a few years ago. From that time on he has been writing and making public appearances.

Since he moved to Shawnigan Lake just over a year ago James has done 17 radio shows. These include programs from CBC, Vancouver, Victoria and local radio stations.

He now has his own show here every Monday night at 7:30.

To the background of music he reads his works in which he attempts to clarify misunderstandings by some people in the interpretation of Christian mythology, East Indian scriptures and Greek mythology.

●

To date, of the well over 200 poems that James has completed and kept, his favorite is "The Masters."

A few lines are:

"I offer my hands to the spike-like conclusions of automatic conceptions

While I willingly give my feet to the gods of the walk

As the demands of my Hunger-hymn decipher the words that these Movers talk."

●

As well as radio appearances James has conducted many public poetry readings. His next one will be on April 25 at 8 p.m. at the Commercial Hotel, Duncan.

Although currently his works have only been published on posters and in periodicals James said he now has a manuscript of 97 poems in Europe under consideration for publication.

Since he has moved out of the slums James said he has found the same "slum consciousness" in all walks of life.

●

While in the slums James said he realized that people are a "very restricting state in themselves. With slum consciousness they reinforce the negative condition existing in and around them. But when I got into the middle classes I found exactly the same thing but in a more subtle form. I found the same humor, same tragic attitudes and the same prideful and envious attitudes to those states above them commonly called the upper classes. Then in studying the upper classes objectively I found the same things that were in the other two states only in a more refined form."

Waterbuoys Win Flotation Event

DUNCAN — A Cowichan Waterbuoys Club team won the men's flotation event in the fifth annual Cowichan River race Sunday.

This is the first time any local club members have won the event.

Al Wallace and his partner Dave Gordon were winners of the 14-mile downstream race. Wallace was first of 53 contestants to arrive at the White Bridge in Duncan.

Winners in other events were: Greg Kalyniuk and Wayne Mossman of Vancouver in the men's free swimming; Victor Jenson, Don Weims and Norm Weims in the junior open; and Lynn Bissell and Pat Lough of Victoria in the women's open.

Outlook Better For Indian Artists

DUNCAN — The future looks brighter for Indian artists and craftsman, thanks to a central purchasing organization set up in Ottawa.

Cowichan carver Cicero August, a director of the Canadian Indian Arts and Crafts Advisory Committee formed about a year ago, said Monday artists will be able to sell their products at worthwhile prices.

August said there is a high demand for Indian prodcts, especially from British Columbia which is considered "a gold mine" of Indian art potential.

August said the advisory committee, which has formed by the federal government, is involved in seven regions across Canada.

The committee's headquarters are an arts and crafts warehouse centre at Ottawa. August said the warehouse, which was also set up by the government, is to enable the committee to establish reasonable prices for crafts.

PAID IMMEDIATELY

"It is a voluntary organization, and prices for the artifacts made by the Indians across the country are set by our committee and Indian government employees," August said.

Not only do Indians send their work to the warehouse centre at Ottawa collect, they receive cash payment in return immediately. The cash payment also applies when the warehouse centre buyers tour the country to buy work, August explained.

The warehouse centre does not seem to be able to get enought from B.C.," he said.

Although a considerable number of Indians take advantage of the warehouse service, many more are not yet fully aware of the great service carried on year round, August said.

During May, a replica of the SS Beaver – the first steamship to ply British Columbia waters – will begin a sea-going tour of coastal communities. Ships of the Canadian Navy will also make visits along the coast in honor of our Centennial. And there's the big Vancouver Sea Festival, July 17-24, in the waters adjacent to our biggest city.

RCMP Musical Ride
The famed horsemen of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police will present their Musical Ride during two periods: June 23 - July 15, and August 12 - September 1 . . . at centres throughout British Columbia.

Abbotsford International Air Show
North America's biggest air show will be greater than ever during Centennial year. The dates are August 14 and 15 at Abbotsford in the Fraser Valley.

Birthday Celebration
Canada's birthday, July 1st, will be celebrated with special enthusiasm in British Columbia this year. One of the more spectacular events for the day will be the start of the London-Victoria Centennial '71 Air Race, expected to draw 100 entries. The starting signal will be given in Victoria to competitors in London, England.

These are just a few among hundreds of special events you can enjoy during our Centennial year. For a complete calendar of events, write: Government of British Columbia, Department of Travel Industry, 1019 Wharf Street, Victoria, British Columbia.

Israel Believed Ready To Return Arab Lands

By MICHAEL ARKUS

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Analysts juggling with maps have concluded here that Israeli Premier Golda Meir may be prepared to hand back about 90 per cent of the Arab territory which Israel occupied after the 1967 Middle East war.

Their conclusions are based on hints Mrs. Meir gave in an interview with the London Times March 13 and reiterated in a speech to her governing Labor party congress recently.

It must remain speculation at this stage, for Mrs. Meir has also made clear that details will be given only in direct peace discussions she wants with the Arabs themselves.

But the analysts say she seems to have implied a belief that Israel's national interest, in a guaranteed peace settlement, would require retention of only a crucial seven per cent of the total Arab lands occupied in the 1967 war

In the interview and speech, she affirmed Israel could not surrender the former Jordanian sector of Jerusalem and is determined on a unified city. Nor will she give up Syria's strategic Golan Heights overlooking Israel's northern villages.

WOULD KEEP STRIP

Also to be retained under the suggestions would be the Gaza Strip on the western coast, and Sharm El Sheikh at the tip of the Egyptian Sinai peninsula. This guards access to Israel's Red Sea port of Elath and is considered vital for the country's oil supplies and economy.

Mrs. Meir's suggestions also provided for a corridor linking Sharm el Sheikh with Elath as well as border adjustments on the occupied west bank of the Jordan.

When Mrs. Meir first made the suggestions there was a storm of protest from the right-wing Nationalist opposition and discontent among religious elements of her coalition government.

She averted a cabinet crisis by assuring the Knesset she had not in fact drawn any maps, and such borders would only be drawn and submitted once proper negotiations began.

Observers here believe the suggestions closely represent what Israel would put forward in negotiations

In the six-day war Israel occupied altogether 26,476 square miles of territory. Of this, the land to be retained by Israel appears to total about 2,000 square miles, or only about seven per cent.

Apart from the Golan Heights, Sharm el Sheikh and a 10-mile wide corridor running to it from Elath, this would allow for more than 200 square miles for both the Jerusalem area and border adjustments on the west bank.

Though this totals only seven per cent of the occupied territory, it would in fact increase Israel's own size by about 25 per cent from its pre-six-day-war area of just over 8,000 square miles.

Mrs. Meir stressed that such border adjustments were necessitated by Israel's vital security needs and were not a question of territorial expansion.

Israeli leaders have frequently charged that Syria continually used the commanding position of the Golan Heights to shell the country's northern villages while Egypt's blockade at Sharm el Sheikh was the reason behind the six-day war.

Israel might even compromise on places like Sharm el Sheikh, for Foreign Minister Abba Eban has said an Israeli presence there did not necessarily mean Israeli sovereignty over the area. He seemed to imply that some arrangements could be reached under which the strategic point would formally be part of Egypt, while Israel maintained a presence there—either through lease or some other means.

MORE ARRESTS EXPECTED IN ALLEGED MURDER PLOT

CHICAGO (AP) — Police say additional arrests are expected in connection with an alleged plot to assassinate Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago and Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, a Negro leader and head of Operation Breadbasket.

The alleged plot was revealed Monday when two black militants—Earl P. Dillard, 37, and Howard Harris, 33—were charged with soliciting to kill Daley and Jackson.

They were arrested Saturday, five days after two other black militants were charged with soliciting to commit murder.

Police declined to link the arrests. A state official said the four men were involved in one plot aimed at touching off racial violence in the city.

April 21 hearings were set for Dillard, Harris and the other two men—Charles Whiteside, 35, and Terry Simmons, 38. The four are being held in lieu of $5,000 bond each.

EXPECT MORE ARRESTS

Deputy Police Supt. John T. Kelly said additional arrests are expected.

Dillard and Harris were arrested, police said, after the police intelligence unit received a tip that an alleged solicitation to commit murder had been made.

Police refused to elaborate. Capt. Thomas Lyons, director of police intelligence, said the murder plot "is not a prank but . . . serious offense."

A state's attorney's official, who asked that his name not be used, said the alleged plot was connected with an effort by militants to assume power in the city's black community after making the neighborhoods susceptible to looting during racial strife.

Daley was unavailable for comment. His aides said he was in Florida on a vacation after winning election to an unprecedented fifth term April 6.

Jackson said in Nashville, Tenn., he was "deeply concerned" about the alleged plot.

Bank Chief Defends Charge Rates

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's chartered banks are justified in their service charges, says the executive director of the Canadian Bankers' Association.

J. Harvey Perry, in a signed editorial in the association's publication The Canadian Banker, argues it would be unfair to many bank customers if the banks did not charge for services associated with operating an account.

The editorial does not mention an increase in the charges announced April 1 and now under investigation by the Prices and Incomes Commission.

Mr. Prry rejects the view that the cost of the service should be absorbed by the bank.

"The plain fact is that a very large part of the work of the 92,000 employees of the Canadian banks is devoted to the daily care of several million customer accounts. The handling of the daily flood of three million cheques alone is an enormous and expensive task.

"All bank customers expect that at any time their account will reflect accurately all transactions in it, and are far less tolerant of delays in a bank branch than they are, for example, in waiting for a television repairman."

MUST BEAR COST

The cost of several hundred million dollars a day must be borne by someone, he says. If it were allocated against the borrower, loans would cost more. If paid for by the depositor, there would have to be a lower return on bank deposits.

The editorial also attacks "the even more enduring misunderstanding that billions of dollars of savings are lying idle in bank accounts."

Mr. Perry says bank deposits must head the list of types of savings actively at work in the economy.

"Apart from the funds that the banks are required by law and prudence to maintain either at the Bank of Canada or in liquid investments, all available monies are at work."

KILLS 3 PATIENTS

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A male patient went berserk and killed three other patients with a piece of broken glass as they slept in the Julio de Matos Mental Hospital Sunday, police said. The killer severally wounded three other patients and a nurse before he was subdued.

Galloping Grandfather Chases the Wind for Fun

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Paul Lowe's pursuit of happiness is to chase the wind and cast a paper ballerina into the sky. At 64, he is in love with kite flying.

Tugging "a plain old 20-cent kite without a tail," the galloping grandfather scampers over vacant fields or desert sands—wherever he hears the wind is blowing.

His wife Gert packs a picnic basket and they are off in their sedan, usually with some neighbor children in the back seat. Lowe figures he drove 21,000 miles last year looking for the best winds.

A retired railroader who now works as a bank courier, Lowe doesn't take two-week vacations. Instead, he has permission from the boss to take off half days when the wind comes up.

★ ★ ★

He works over the inexpensive kites to his own tastes, spending as much as 2½ hours to design, restring and tie at least 40 knots on each kite.

He is not interested in box kites or bat kites. "I don't think there is anything beautiful about them in the sky," he says, adding quickly: "I'm not trying to knock them. It's just that the cross stick or T-type—that's my baby!"

The neighborhood kids who accompany him get to use his kites, which he turns out by the hundreds and gives away. No two are alike.

★ ★ ★

Youthful faces turned to the sky showed envy on a recent outing as Lowe's soaring kite, proud as a spinmaker on the sea, made 170-degree dives, turned circles, and floated on his command.

"Make it dive, Mr. Lowe!" shouted one 10-year-old companion, adding: "He's the best kite-flyer I have ever known."

DAFFS STALLING FREEWAY TRAFFIC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Daffodils planted last fall along 65 miles of the Trans Canada Highway as a tourist attraction are proving too attractive.

Motorists stopping to pick the flowers, despite signs prohibiting cars stopping or pedestrians walking, are causing such a traffic hazard RCMP are going to issue them tickets.

WASHINGTON — Eastern Air Lines pilots agreed Monday to fly extra hours beyond their union contract requirements to help ease the airline's financial problems. Eastern vice-president Frank Borman, a former astronaut, said an agreement was reached with the Air Line Pilots Association to let the airline's 3,600 pilots volunteer to fly 20 extra hours over the remainder of this year. The pilots will be paid at straight time rates for the extra hours.

HONG KONG — Armed Chinese Communist junks seized a yacht with four Americans aboard last week but released the yacht and its passengers after four days of "very courteous" detention in a coastal fishing village, one of the Americans said today. The four, three of whom are U.S. government employees working for the army and air force in Okinawa, were captured while sailing the yacht Venture from Hong Kong to Okinawa. The three government employees are Theodore Seavy, 44, Hentley, Mont.; Larry Tippens, 30, Atlanta, Ga., and Floyd Sebring, 45, from California. The fourth is Bill Baxter, 56, San Francisco, a Christian Scientist lay minister who has been a well-known businessman in Aisa for almost 20 years.

FT. MEADE, Md. — The U.S. army granted an honorable discharge Monday to 1st Lt. Louis P. Font, a 1968 West Point graduate who sought dismissal from the service as a conscientious objector to the Vietnam war. Front's official discharge at midnight followed the dropping of charges that he had willfully disobeyed an order. He could have been sentenced up to 25 years in prison if he had been convicted of the charges. A spokesman at the Pentagon said Font, 24, was released because an army selection board recommended his discharge "for substandard performance of duty."

MILAN — Antonio Casalegno, 26, missed the last bus early today, so he hitched a ride in a passing police patrol car. All went well until a policeman heard something tinkle in a plastic bag Casalegno was carrying. It was coins. Casalegno first said they came from his girl friend's piggy bank, then confessed he had rifled a juke box. They took him to jail.

Body Identified

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Alexander Wilson, 29, of Vancouver, was identified Monday as one of the victims of the weekend sinking of a 40-foot cruiser near here.

The other victim was earlier identified as John Donald Barber, 60, of South Burnaby.

Both bodies were recovered Saturday.

Emmy Nomination Bestowed On Oscar-Scorning Scott

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — George C. Scott, who says he abhors acting awards, finds himself with another honor. He has been nominated for an Emmy along with his wife, Montreal-born Colleen Dewhurst, for their performances in The Price.

The Academy of Television Arts and Sciences nominated Scott Monday for the best single performance by a leading actor. Also named were Jack Cassidy for The Andersonville Trial, Hal Holbrook for A Clear and Present Danger, Richard Widmark for Vanished and Gig Young for The Neon Ceiling.

Scott also has been nominated by the Motion Picture Academy as best actor of 1970 for his role in Patton. He tried to have his name stricken as a candidate, but the academy refused.

The Andersonville Trial, which Scott directed, also won an Emmy nomination as the outstanding single program of the 1970-71 season. Its competition: Hamlet and The Price, both by Hallmark Hall of Fame; They're Tearing Down Tim O'Reilley's Bar from Rod Serling's Night Gallery; and the four-hour Vanished.

Scott was not available for comment on the Emmy nomination.

NOT MENTIONED

Hamlet took top honors in the nominations with a total of 13. Oddly, Richard Chamberlain, who played Hamlet, didn't get a mention.

Among the comedy series, The Mary Tyler Moore Show received the most nominations—nine.

For the outstanding dramatic series: The First Churchills, Ironside, N.E.T. Playhouse, Marcus Welby, M.D. and The Senator—The Bold Ones. Nine nominations went to the latter show, which has been cancelled by NBC.

Other nominations included:

Single performance by leading actress: Miss Dewhurst, The Price; Lee Grant, The Neon Ceiling; Miss Grant, Ransom for a Dead Man.

Leading actor in dramatic series: Raymond Burr, a native of New Westminster, B.C., Ironside; Mike Connors, Mannix; Hal Holbrook, The Senator—The Bold Ones; Robert Young, Marcus Welby, M.D.

Accord Reached

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Roadbuilders' Association has reached tentative contract agreements in negotiations with three unions representing about 5,500 workers. The three unions involved are the Vancouver locals of the International Union of Operating Engineers and Tunnel and Rock Workers' Union, representing workers in Vancouver, New Westminster and Victoria.

More Movies

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan residents soon will be able to enjoy more hours of public entertainment on Sundays — and in a cleaner environment under legislation passed Monday.

Under amendments to the Lord's Day act movies may begin at 1:30 p.m. instead of 8:30 p.m. Sundays and sporting events may be held Sunday evening in addition to the present afternoon-only regulations.

The legislature also gave final reading to the establishment of a clean environment authority which would have full control over licences granted to industries discharging contaminants into the environment.

Admendments to the water resources commission act will give the commission power to prohibit industries changing the quality of water.

Tax Hike Seen

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan people will face substantial tax increases in two years time, Opposition leader Allan Blakeney said Monday. He told the legislature's finance committee that in two years the provincial government will have to increase taxes to recover about $20 million which it will lose in federal payments because of the gradual elimination of programs and because of lower equalization payments.

THE WEATHER

Temperatures again dropped sharply in the interior under the influence of dry air but were held a little higher than the previous night along the coast as the cover of dense high cloud persisted.

No appreciable change is expected today as one Pacific system moves into northern California.

Another system to the west of the weather ship is now developing and forecast to become quite intense with its motion carrying it into the northeastern gulf of Alaska. This will spread rain into the north coast tonight. The cloud from this same disturbance will reach into the south coast and the central interior Wednesday.

Because nothing less will serve British Columbia.

B.C. Tel has a billion-dollar plan

Electronically Controlled Switching is part of it.

Why should seven relatively small communities be the first in British Columbia to have electronically-controlled telephone exchanges — and the new phone services these computer-like switches make possible?

A very basic reason: These exchanges now have become the most practical means through which B.C. Tel can meet the increased demands for phone services in communities of this size, where population growth is bringing greater telephone service requirements.

The communities involved now are Sparwood in the East Kootenay; Houston and Mackenzie in the Northern Interior; Winfield and Lakeview Heights in the Okanagan; and Port Hardy and Lantzville on Vancouver Island. Others will follow.

Their new exchanges, designed and built in Canada to serve communities with up to 2,500 phones, read signals from dial or touch-calling phones and complete connections almost instantly. And their memory facility makes possible additional optional services, including:

Call Waiting, where a tone on the line you are using signals that another incoming call has been attempted; Three-Way Calling which enables you — on local calling — to connect your own three-way conference call; and Speed Calling, in which you may have the exchange programmed so you can reach frequently-called numbers by dialing only one or two digits.

In B.C.Tel's planning, such new technology is applied where and when practical or necessary as part of the continuing program of telephone network expansion and improvement so essential to meet the growing demands of British Columbians for phone services.

Such an approach is basic to orderly and economic advancement of the phone system to meet the increasing demands — and changing desires — for phone services throughout this vast and rugged province. It is implicit in the expansion program for the 1970s — expressed as B.C. Tel's Billion-Dollar Plan because that is the minimum cost the company faces in creating new and improved facilities necessary to fill British Columbia's projected telephone requirements.

Nothing less will serve the growing number of British Columbians.

U.S. Irking Canadians, Says Pravda

MOSCOW (AP) — Recent U.S. criticism of Canadian policy amounts to gross interference in Canadian affairs, the Soviet newspaper Pravda says, and has caused wide indignation among the Canadian people.

Relations between the two American neighbors have been aggravated by the 1969-70 foreign policy report of the state department to the U.S. Congress, the Communist party newspaper says.

"Canadians have had a number of occasions to see that whenever the Canadian government has tried to take measures which are in the interest of the country but which do not suit certain circles of its powerful neighbor to the south, or which do not correspond to the self-interests of the American monopolies, the United States would unceremoniously intrude into Canadian affairs and use different forms of pressure and sometimes even apply direct pressure to change an undesired government."

The foreign policy report disapproves "most characteristically" of Canada's aim to limit the growth of foreign property in that country, Pravda reports. Other points objected to in the report, it says, are:

Canada's 50-per-cent reduction of its NATO forces, Canada's claim of sovereignty over its Arctic territories and the establishment of the 12-mile limit on territorial waters.

"This new attempt of the United States to interfere in Canada's affairs caused an acute reaction among the Canadian public. It expresses indignation with Washington's gross interference and regards it as a brazen attempt of the United States to bring pressure on the Canadian government."

TV Special On Pentagon Wins Prize

NEW YORK (AP) — The Selling of the Pentagon, the Columbia Broadcasting System's controversial television documentary about Pentagon public relations practices, has won a special Peabody Prize to be announced formally April 21, The New York Times reports.

The Times says the Peabody citation hails the CBS documentary as "electronic journalism at its finest." The newspaper also says that the award will break a 31-year-old tradition not to consider programs after the calendar year ending Dec. 31. The Selling of the Pentagon originally was televised Feb. 23.

SPIRO IRKED

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew later called it a disreputable program and said it created a false impression. The House of Representatives interstate and foreign commerce committee subpoenaed all televised and untelevised material pertaining to the program. CBS has refused to furnish untelevised material.

The Times reports that the Peabody citation says The Selling of the Pentagon brought out an issue of genuine public controversy and would undoubtedly prompt major reforms in the public relations policies of the Pentagon.

The Pentagon has said that some changes have been made as a result of the documentary.

The Peabody Prizes are administered by the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism of the University of Georgia.

Gas Victims Were Warned Says Mine

GOLCONDA, Ill. (AP) — Seven Southern Illinois miners killed by poisonous gas deep underground Monday had wandered into a forbidden area despite warnings, mine officials say.

Wayne Faller, manager of the Barnett shaft of the Ozark Mahoning Fluorspar Co., said mine officials "knew there was a stronger concentration of gas than normal" in the area. He said they had warned the men to stay out of that part of the mine.

But he said that when one miner entered the area 800 feet underground, six others followed in an attempt to rescue him. All were overcome by deadly hydrogen-sulphide gas.

Five of the victims were dead when they were lifted from the mine shaft. The two others died later in a hospital.

C. W. Sohosky, office manager of the mining firm, said 16 workers were in the shaft when they reached the pocket of gas.

Nine of the men scrambled for clean air when the others failed to return from the forbidden area, he said.

All the victims were from this area.

Fluorspar, a bluish, hard mineral mined like coal, is used in the manufacture of aluminum.

Women Unite —And Fight

TORONTO (CP) — An International Women's Liberation conference entered its fourth day Monday still under a veil of secrecy.

But word has leaked out that dissent is widespread and some delegates have on occasion resorted to fist fighting.

The meeting, involving 400 delegates from various women's liberation organizations, is being held at a secondary school.

The initiating committee from Washington reportedly brought the conference to Canada in the belief that six women from Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia would be denied United States entry visas.

A number of delegates commented on the sessions but refused to be identified.

The conference theme is peace and the shared oppression of women throughout the world.

"But even though the delegates attend all the sessions and listen attentatively to the Indo-Chinese, everything is underlaid by squabbling," one delegate said.

"The Black Panther women won't talk to the white women because they are white and therefore cannot understand or take part in the struggles of third-world people.

"The Gay Liberation Front (women radical lesbians) won't talk to the straight women because they are obviously repressed by sexual role-playing," another delegate said.

It was reported the conference has three basic lines of division — radical, sexual and ideological.

A meeting spokesman defended the tight security, which is trying hard to maintain secrecy by barring the news media.

INDIRA GANDHI . . . wearing victory garlands

Indira Win Panics Bureaucrats

By RAM SUNDAR

NEW DELHI (CP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's spectacular election victory seems to be having a healthy effect on the working of her government

For the first time in nearly two years things have started moving in New Delhi. The wheels of the administration almost came to a stop in early 1969 when the battle for power between Mrs. Gandhi and the old guard of the ruling Congress party started.

But after the election in March a senior official borrowed a neighbor's bicycle to be able to reach his office in time. "The long holiday is over," he said. "Henceforth it is going to be work, work and more work for all of us."

The remark reflected the new atmosphere in the Indian capital.

Mrs. Gandhi has made it clear that she intends to use her vastly strengthened political position to give a boost to the national economy. And in a country where the government-owned sector is rapidly expanding, this really means streamlining the bureaucracy.

Her first act after the elections was to call a meeting of the permanent heads of various ministries and impress on them the need for an "action-oriented" program.

She is reported to have told them that the people of India had returned her party to power with a massive majority—350 in a house of 518—in the hope that they need not wait endlessly for some improvement in their lot.

"Our people want performance and not promises," Mrs. Gandhi said. "We cannot afford to let them down."

The serious reverses suffered by the Congress party in the last general election held in 1967 were partly attributed to the Gandhi government's failure to provide more jobs to the unemployed — estimated at over 15 million — to give security to tenant farmers and to bring down the prices of essential commodities.

Mrs. Gandhi has been saying that India must have officials "committed" to the goals of a welfare state. As one of her close aides put it: "We do not want glorified clerks but dedicated administrators."

Press reports say Mrs. Gandhi is working on a scheme which would make it obligatory for each senior official to show concrete results in his field within a stipulated period. The project has already caused a big flutter among officials who have been accustomed to leisurely ways of functioning over the years.

One area where Prime Minister Gandhi will have to show results in a matter of months is prices.

The prices of many essential commodities have skyrocketed in recent months. Despite the success of the "green revolution," wheat, rice, vegetable oils and milk in sufficient quantities are still beyond the reach of poor people.

The government's efforts in the last six months to control prices have failed, and there are fears that the rising discontent may be exploited by leftist trade unions. The Communist and Socialist groups which were badly mauled in the election are planning massive demonstrations on economic issues.

At a Socialist party meeting in Bombay one of its leaders said that "thousands" of volunteers are ready to be arrested.

The right-wing Jana Sangh People's League party which also suffered major reverses at the polls is said to be mobilizing housewives in the capital for a series of anti-government demonstrations.

Fortunately for Mrs. Gandhi, since the bulk of poor voters sided with her party, she may not find it difficult to control the demonstrations.

At the same time, unless she does something tangible for them India's poor, estimated at nearly 450 million, may become disillusioned and turn to the left and right parties for inspiration.

Frank Moraes, editor of the influential Indian Express group of newspapers, pointed out in his column the other day that "the prime minister must be aware that her overwhelming victory at the polls leaves her with not a single alibi for the future."

Moraes wrote: "A sophisticated electorate does not take a politican's promises too seriously. But in a country where nearly 80 per cent of the population is both illiterate and poor, the masses are apt to interpret electoral promises literally. The more so when these promises add up to more food, more shelter and more clothing, more employment, higher wages and lower prices."

Observers in New Delhi believe Mrs. Gandhi is determined to succeed. The old cynicism about her has gone. Her post-election dominance has inspired not only hope but fear.

The huge New Delhi Secretariat is which more than 150,000 government officials work is agog with rumors that heaceforth merit and not seniority will count in promotions.

As one university professor put it: Mrs. Gandhi may strike some terror into the hearts of our officials. This will be her biggest service to the long-suffering people of India."

Short Life Seen For Short Shorts

FLORENCE, Italy (Reuter) — Italy's fashion designers are promising to make a strong bid this week for a return to a conventional "civilized look," with hot pants given the cold shoulder in fashions for next fall and winter.

Ninety-three Italian designers of luxury ready-to-wear, knitwear, leather fashions and boutique clothes for men and women converged on Florence Easter weekend.

About 600 foreign and Italian buyers and 200 fashion writers will be on hand to view the collections starting today and ending Thursday.

While the girls in Rome, Florence and Milan have not hesitated to adopt the short shorts look reminiscent of Lana Turner in the 1940s, designers are uncertain that the hot pants will survive the summer.

Fabiani, one of the potentates of Italian high fashions, will introduce a ready-to-wear collection today that will feature "a return to normal lengths" — and no hot pants.

"I foresee a return to conventional fashions, and skirts that reach just below the knee," he said in a pre-collection interview.

Boutique designer Mike La Mendola, one of several Americans who have successfully crashed the spaghetti curtain of fashions, said he will show "civilized dresses instead of hippie or kookie clothes."

Daytime dresses will be sheared off just below the knee, and there will be no trousers for streetwear and no shorts.

One prominent Italian designer confessed that the shorts outfits he showed for this spring and summer did not sell. While the chain stores reported good sales of hot pants, he explained, women who wear luxury-priced clothing just won't pay high prices for shorts.

Midnight Census Enrages Britons

By ALVIN B. WEBB

LONDON (UPI) — The young mother stripped in protest because she said Britain's 10-year census will lay bare the secrets of an unsuspecting public right down to its soul.

The nation's Liberal party chief said the questions went far beyond what was reasonable and he would rather be fined than answer some of them.

A persistent caller to census headquarters had his own solution — behead the director of the survey.

Despite it all, Britain's $24 million 1971 census will go ahead beginning April 25.

No one escapes — not even the head lady at Buckingham Palace who will fill in her name as "Elizabeth II" and occupation as "Queen of England" and then have to tell the census taker how many bathrooms she has in the palace.

Everyone will get the forms — including the keeper of the lonely Doncaster lighthouse in lovely Northern Scotland and the ship's deckhand whose vessel happens to put into port when the census taker arrives.

Even a traveller at Heathrow Airport — just passing through — will have to fill out the form if he is in Britain at the "magic hour" of midnight April 25.

Those who refuse to comply can be fined $120. In 1961, 80 persons out of 53,750,737 refused to fill in their forms.

Sue Rogers, mother of two children and supporter of women's liberation, showed her opposition to the census Sunday by stripping off her blouse to reveal a flesh-colored bra. She was attending a young Liberals meeting in Plymouth.

"I would take it all off if it would stop the census," she said later.

Written across Mrs. Rogers' chest, in black India, was 6174 — her "census number," she said, complaining that the questions were too nosey.

Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe agreed. He said the questions — particularly those about names of all members of his household and where they lived five years ago — want "far beyond what is reasonable."

He said he would leave some of the questions unanswered — and risk the fine if necessary.

Cosmopolitan Editor Disapproves of Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — Helen Gurley Brown, author of Sex and the Single Girl and editor of Cosmopolitan magazine, says Prime Minister Trudeau's marriage to a girl "33 years younger" than himself is "outrageous."

Mrs. Brown made the comment on the CBC television program Front Page Challenge, broadcast Monday night.

"What I think your prime minister has done is set back the cause of a certain kind of equality for a long, long time," she said.

"I know everyone is in love with the idea that this 54, 55-year-old man married a 22-year-old woman. I think that's outrageous."

Trudeau, 51, married 22-year-old Margaret Sinclair in Vancouver last month.

"I think 55-year-old men should marry 40-year-old women or 45-year-old women or even their own contemporaries," Mrs. Brown said.

"I think the idea that you must go and pick someone nubile who is 33 years younger than you is not any example to set for the rest of the men in the world.

"I can say that because I am not Canadian. I would have to be more careful about criticizing my own president."

SPRING DRESSES from Belle Saunders, designer for Abe Scrader, have waistline interest and softly moving skirts. In the dress on the left the black, red and white dots and stipes of the pattern have been turned to form the jacket border, cuffs and hem. Sauce Recipe Uses Frozen Cranberries

By HILDA BEASTALL

Remember the fresh cranberries you stashed away in the freezer last December when the supply was plentiful?

Perhaps you came across them recently, as I did, and wondered what to use them for now it's April.

Cranberries are full of vitamin C, necessary to all of us on a daily basis, so why not cook up a pound to have ready as delicious sauce for use at practically any meal?

You can make a Cranberry Sauce which is neither too sweet nor sour, and it takes only 15 minutes to prepare. To use in the ways mentioned here: wash 1 pound frozen cranberries, discarding any brown ones or those otherwise marred.

Put 4 cups cranberries, 1¼ cups cold water, 1¼ cups light brown sugar in a saucepan over a quick heat. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly to prevent burning or sticking.

The berries will begin popping as they boil. Gently stir while active boiling continues for no longer than 10 minutes.

Remove from heat. Cool slightly, then press through a fine strainer removing all the thick pulp. You will notice how bright red it is without any additional coloring, and if you work enough at pressing the pulp through with a wooden spoon, you soon have only the skins left in the strainer.

The product will not be a jelly; it is a sauce, without the sweetness usually associated with syrup.

Pour this into small glass jars with covers. You will have about 3 eight-ounce jars from one pound of cranberries. Store it at the back of refrigerator shelves. It will keep for about 1 month.

This sauce goes beautifully with other foods besides meats. Use it generously on breakfast buckwheat pancakes, omelettes or on hot cornbread; a spoonful over a cottage cheese and lettuce salad in place of mayonnaise; and gobs of it on yogurt and cooked brown rice.

As an early spring special, try sparkling Cranberry Sauce on wedges of home-made apple pie, various apple slice desserts, and on warm gingerbread.

A hot savory casserole, filled with protein but without meat, is delicious made as follows and served with Cranberry Sauce:

3 cups cooked brown rice
2 small eggs
1 cup brown breadcrumbs
1 cup grated cheese
A pinch each of dried thyme and savory.

If the rice was cooked with salt, no more will be needed. Otherwise, add one-half teaspoon salt; go easy on it for cheese is salty.

Beat the eggs into the rice separately, add other ingredients. Turn into greased quart-size casserole and bake uncovered for 45 minutes at 350 deg. or until lightly brown.

Serve at once with thick dressing of Cranberry Sauce sprinkled with finely chopped parsley and chives.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Safe in Jail

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem is the man I am living with. I love him very much. We have two kids and we aren't married yet. He always has some excuse. Sometimes he stays away from home a week at a time. The only time I am sure of where he is is when they detain him in jail. He makes good money and he's not stingy with it.

I hate to leave him because everything we have is paid for. And like I said, I love the guy. Write me back and tell me what to do. — Undecided

DEAR UNDECIDED: It's my guess that you've already decided that living with him is better than living without him. Face it, as long as you love the guy you'll always find a reason for not leaving him.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 18, and she's engaged to a young man who is 22. They want a June wedding, and here is where we disagree.

They picked a dirty old run-down hall with outdoor rest rooms. Also, they want a justice of the peace to marry them, and a reception later. For this they want bridesmaides and ushers and my daughter wants a white gown and veil.

We are well able to give them a beautiful wedding in a church, with a minister, and a dinner and reception at a nice club.

There is no sentimental reason for their choosing this dirty run-down hall. It doesn't even have an organ or piano. Our daughter was raised in the Lutheran church and her fiance says he's an atheist

We just can't see it their way. Can you help? — Have Problems

DEAR PROBLEMS: It would appear that your daughter is anti-establishment and wants a wedding in keeping with her sentiments. If you insist that she either have a traditional type wedding or the kind she wants without you, prepare to be excluded.

DEAR ABBY: I am caught in the middle. My mother and my aunt are both on me to take my cousin to a school dance. They got me to take her to one school dance and I have never been teased so much in all my life. I was the laughing stock of the school.

I told my mother she would have to kill me dead before I would take my cousin to the dance and my mother said, "Well, that can be arranged." What can I do? — Cousin.

DEAR COUSIN: Get a friend of yours to take her. That way you'll be off the hook, your cousin will have a date for the dance and everybody will be happy.

DEAR ABBY: There is a school teacher in Hamilton, Ohio, who is either very mean or very stupid.

She is constantly asking the kids to write something about their dads. What they do, how much daddy means to them, etc. She has asked the kids to make up poems about their fathers, to write an imaginary letter to their fathers, etc.

Yesterday my son came home and told me that this teacher gave the class another "father" assignment. This time each one had to stand up and describe his father. One kid, with tears in his eyes said, "My parents are divorced, and I don't remember my father very well."

Abby, doesn't that teacher know that some children have no fathers through death or divorce?

I hope you think this is important enough to use. — Ohio Mother

DEAR MOTHER: I do, and I shall.

Spring Flower Show Plans Firm

By HILDA BEASTALL

The Sidney and North Saanich Garden Club has all plans laid for their spring flower show on Saturday of this week, April 17, at Sanscha Hall, Sidney.

Hilda

With spring flowers in general well advanced as this is written, the exhibitors should have no difficulties filling the classes listed for competition.

Some March irises will likely still be blooming this week in more exposed gardens — reticulata varieties as an instance, while in warmer gardens, Iris pumila will be well advanced.

Narcissi and early tulips should be at their best, for so far no hot days have occurred to "blow" the flowers. Winds have been a problem with large flowered daffs, but early varieties of tulips have shorter stems than the Parrots, Darwins and Lily-flowered.

The class for flowering shrubs and trees will bring out something of interest; it may be a splendid branch of Berberis darwinii or one of its hybrids, with glowing masses of tiny hanging blossoms; or Corylopsis with fragrant pendant blooms of pale lemon.

Or there may be branch of the early Broom, Cytisus praecox; two spring blooming Magnolias will qualify, as will Osmanthus delavayi and the bi-generic hybrid Osmarea burkwoodi — both sweetly scented and evergreen.

With such lovely shrubs as these blooming in April, plus early rhododendrons, camellias and viburnums, it is a wonder to me that every garden club in the South Vancouver Island area is not displaying these choice spring plants.

No other part of the country can put on spring shows in April with these plus the spring blubs, all grown and flowered outdoors.

A few years ago, with far less gardeners, but more who were willing to do community work, a splendid show was organized for the last week of April attracting entries from many interested groups, and visitors from the British Columbia mainland, Port Angeles and the Seattle area.

Today we need flower shows more than ever, and better ones. We need every plant and flower named so that others may share the knowledge acquired by the exhibitors; and we need more sheer beauty just spread out in front of us to delight the senses.

The Sidney and North Saanich show on Saturday will doubtless fulfil all these needs. Be there between 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. in Sanscha Hall, Sidney, as an exhibitor or a visitor, perhaps as both.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

From declarer's point of view, the most expensive play in bridge is the "unnecessary finesse." In today's deal, there is presented an elementary example of the unnecessary finesse in action. Undoubtedly, virtually all of the readers will be of the opinion that South's play of the hand was puerile. And they will all be right. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

On West's opening lead of the club jack, dummy's king was played, East dropping the queen. The nine of hearts was then led, and when East followed suit with the deuce, South played his three-spot, finessing against East's hoped for king.

As can be observed, West captured this lead with his king. He then returned the club ten, on which the board's ace was played. Quite naturally, East ruffed this trick with his remaining trump. Eventually, declarer lost another club, plus a spade, to incur a one-trick defeat.

Declarer's taking of the trump finesse must be classified as ridiculous, since his four heart contract was there for the taking provided neither of the defenders trumped any of his winners.

Surely, with East dropping the club queen on the opening lead, it was just about absolutely certain that East had no more clubs. And if the trump finesse lost to West, the latter would return a club for East to ruff. Hence declarer should have drawn trumps as quickly as possible, to eliminate the danger of East ruffing a club.

An examination of the North-South hands would have revealed that the trump finesse was unnecessary. South had just three losers: a spade, a trump, and a club. queen of trumps should have been led (to entice East, if he held the king, into covering the queen with the king). When East would follow with a low trump, South would overtake his queen with the ace, and return a trump. West would take his king — and the adversely held trumps would be removed.

No matter how the four outstanding trumps were divided, the recommended line of play would guarantee the contract. Whichever defender won the second trump lead with the king, he could return nothing that his partner would trump, since his partner would have no more trumps.

Sesame Street Gets Try-out

LONDON (AP) — Sesame Street will make its British debut next month on Harlech Television, one of Britain's independent commercial companies.

Harlech, which has four million viewers in Wales and western England, said it would show the children's program for two weeks to see if British children like it.

If they do, the nationwide commercial network will take it over.

The British Broadcasting Corp. didn't think the program would go over and turned it down.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Mrs. Mary Watson Palmer, of the Florence Crittenton Association in Chicago, writes me of some of the fine services provided to pregnant unwed girls and women, and information on the prevention of unwanted pregnancies for young people, available at the 50 agencies around the U.S. bearing the Florence Crittenton name.

The Chicago agency is the national "standard setter." While the main purpose is to provide a friendly home setting and to care for the pregnant girl, the executive directors of most of these homes also carry a preventive message to teen-agers in high schools or in youth groups, and to their families; they speak with the tremendous amount of experience they gain by helping more than 22,000 expectant girls each year.

As Mrs. Palmer writes me "Goodness knows, there are enough unwed pregnant girls to fill every maternity home in the country, but somehow the girls are not seeking this help."

I imagine that the difficulty is that most girls never heard of the Florence Crittenton Association, and they don't know how kindly they can be treated in such a home. I have visited in a Crittenton home and so I know how fine it can be. Not only can the girl live there until her baby is born, but then if she wants to give the child outforadoption, she can do so with the help of the Crittenton experts.

In trying to reach the girls who need their services, the directors say: "We offer a friendly home setting where there are other girls like you making use of this time to face some realities of the situation now and what it will be when the baby comes. There's a full program of recreation, school, group discussion, and information. You'll get good medical care, for you and the baby you expect; you can look at the options available for the future of your baby and make your own choice, free from pressure."

As they go on to say, "While the baby grows, you grow. There's a whole wonderful life in your future; what you do till the baby comes can groove you in. The fees are scaled to ability to pay; we'll help you work this out, as well as answer your insurance and legal questions. Why not call today and ask for information? Maybe you just want to rap, but maybe, Florence Crittenton can be your answer."

The problems that young girls face in bearing a child without a husband are very real; their schooling is interrupted, and they are excluded from the friendships and social life of their schoolmates. In addition, their own parents' attitudes may make their life even more difficult.

The girls commonly say, "I never thought it would happen to me." They are surprisingly ignorant about how their bodies function and about reproduction. Many girls know that contraceptives are available but do not use them because they see their use as a denial of love, or they depend on misinformation about when they can and cannot become pregnant.

Some of the Crittenton homes also care for non-pregnant girls who need to get away from problem homes or have gotten into trouble with the law or their schools, and have been referred by the court. These non-pregnant girls attend maternal and health classes and the personal problem discussion groups along with the expectant girls, with the idea that they will then be more able to avoid an unwanted pregnancy out of wedlock.

MIRA SIGNS WITH MIAMI

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback George Mira has signed a one-year contract with Miami Dolphins of the National Football League.

"We agreed on everything right away," Mira said after meeting Dolphin officials.

Mira still has two years to go on a $50,000-a-year contract with San Francisco '49ers. NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle made him a free agent last January after he had spent a year on the taxi squad of Baltimore Colts.

No salary figures were disclosed but Mira said the '49ers would have to make up the difference between his Dolphin pay and $50,000.

AIRPORTS STEP UP BIRD WAR

TORONTO (CP) — At Toronto Island Airport, an attendant tilts his shotgun upward and searches the sky warily.

Two men patrol the boundaries of Toronto International Airport daily, firing gun-like bangers.

The purpose in both cases is the same: to frighten away birds that can damage aircraft or possibly cause an air disaster.

Canada's research into the problem is co-ordinated by the National Research Council's associate committee on bird hazards to aircraft, appointed in 1962.

Represented on the committee are the department of transport, Air Canada, CP Air, the Canadian Forces, the Canadian Wildlife Federation, airline pilots' associations and major aircraft manufacturers.

TRY NEW RADAR

Toronto biologist W. H. Gunn, a committee consultant representing the wildlife federation, said in an interview air traffic controllers at Winnipeg airport will test a more modern weapon next month—a new type of radar installed solely to track huge flocks of geese.

A $50,000 experimental radar is being imported from Britain for use at Winnipeg airport. Present radar shows distance and direction from the airport as well as speed, but the new radar also gives the altitude of the geese.

Dr. Gunn said the decision to test the radar probably was the result of a near disaster May 11, 1969, as a twin-engined Boeing 737 was arriving at Winnipeg with 80 passengers on a CP Air flight from Toronto.

The plane received a severe jolt at 3,600 feet, but somehow managed to land safely. Investigators found that the plane had run into a flock of geese and received major damage. Six weeks of repairs were necessary.

Dr. Gunn said if the plane had been in a five or 10 degree bank at the time of the collision, it would have ingested geese in both engines and crashed.

STARLINGS BLAMED

In fact, a flock of starlings was blamed for a crash at Boston Oct. 4, 1969, that killed 62 people.

Bird collisions, called strikes, happen quite frequently. In 1970, Air Canada reported 216 strikes but no resulting crashes.

Only 25 strikes occurred at Toronto International Airport, a rate of 3.4 per 10,000 take-offs and landings—one of the lowest rates in Canada.

The airport has been made inhospitable to birds. The grass is cut short to reduce insects and rodents that birds eat, and trees and bushes that might act as perches have been removed.

But in the winter the bare snow-covered airport apparently looks just like Arctic Tundra to snowy owls. They flock to it.

Dieter Rosenkranz, a falconer by hobby, is paid by the airport to trap the owls and then release them 100 miles away.

Dr. Gunn said Vancouver International Airport has a high rate of strikes because its geographical location and climate attract birds. Its strike rate last year was 6.49 per 10,000 landings and take-offs.

The rate at Thunder Bay International Airport was 9.22, but is being reduced because a garbage dump near the airport was removed. The dump attracted gulls, who found it convenient to loaf near the airport between meals.

'Remove Politics From Education'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hilda Kriederman of Vernon, a former president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation, said Monday that an independent commission should be created to take education out of the political arena.

Trustees and teachers are hampered by government regulations, she said, and the government should become involved only when it is told—not asked—how much money is needed for education each year.

Mrs. Kriederman spoke at the opening of the federation's annual four-day convention where she received the 1971 Ferguson Award for outstanding contribution to education.

Earlier, more than 1,000 delegates endorsed, by a large majority, a resolution urging "that no teacher should be required to perform school supervision during the noon hour."

The teachers also voted to oppose all use of shift systems in elementary and secondary schools.

REDUCE CLASS SIZE

They want to reduce the maximum class size in B.C. to 38 pupils, instead of the present 39. They would hold a kindergarten class to a high of 30 pupils and a primary class to 34.

The delegates also attacked attempts to replace certified teachers in classrooms by student teachers and auxiliary aides.

No student teacher or auxiliary personnel should be assigned to any class as a substitute teacher, said an adopted resolution presented by the Burnaby Teachers Association.

Another Burnaby resolution, adopted unanimously, provided that teacher aides should perform only non-professional tasks at the direction and under the supervision of the principal and the classroom teacher.

The Charlesworth Memorial Award to a top student son or daughter of a teacher went to Patricia Lynne Sinclair, 19, of White Rock.

New Hilroy awards for outstanding achievement by classroom teachers in developing new methods of teaching practice went to Terry Mollen of Prince George, Mrs. Janet Stasiuk of Alberni and Susan Close and Janice Micklethwaite, both of China Creek.

Plumber Does Work For Nothing

SEATTLE (AP) — John Lindquist of Seattle is making a personal effort to show that "people can't live in a selfish little world of their own."

In a classified advertisement in the Seattle Times, Lindquist, a 48-year-old licensed plumber, has offered to do minor plumbing jobs for elderly people unable to pay.

"Of course I just can't drop everything and respond right away to every call, but I'll do everything I can when I can," he says.

Lindquist hopes the idea will spread because, as he says, "It's a risky business, being old."

"I've known so many who have worked so hard," he says, "and they deserved better."

Alberta Curbs Municipal Aid

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

EDMONTON (CP) — Faced with some financial problems and reluctant to impose new taxes, Alberta's Social Credit government has taken steps during the current session of the legislature to impose a ceiling on grants to municipalities.

Burdened with their own budget difficulties, municipal officials have cried foul and pleaded for a stay of proceedings, but have been told by Premier Harry Strom that they must share the responsibility "to try to limit the increasing costs we are facing in health and education."

Once the grateful recipients of one-third of the royalties from oil and natural gas—which will reach an estimated $170 million during the current fiscal year—municipalities will be limited to $38 million a year. Last year they got a little less than $38 million.

After an emergency meeting of the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association, 25 delegates personally placed their case before Premier Strom but were told:

"We had no choice but to put a cap on assistance to municipalities. . . . We are now in a position where we are not able to provide for capital costs out of general revenues."

EXPECTS DEFICIT

The government anticipates a $166.2-million deficit in the capital account portion of its $1,182-million 1971-72 budget, and will have to borrow an estimated $85 million to meet its commitments.

All the delegation got for its efforts was a promise from Municipal Affairs Minister Fred Colborne that grants will "be reviewed in consultation with municipalities with a view to arriving at some understanding."

The premier said that what was described by Mayor Rod Sykes of Calgary as a "hasty, ill-conceived and destructive action" was in fact a well thought-out decision.

Though unpalatable to municipalities, it was made because the government was convinced that it must "pick up more of the costs of health and education."

EDUCATION COST UP

Education will consume about 35 per cent of the provincial budget or $41.6 million, compared with $387 million in the 1970-71 fiscal year.

Mr. Strom said that though frozen, unconditional municipal assistance grants in Alberta are still among the most generous in Canada.

Municipalities say the freeze will force them to increase property taxes and the government apparently sees the same result.

In what is expected to be an election year, it plans to increase the homeowners' tax discount to $75 from $50. The discount for home-owners receiving the guaranteed income supplement to the old-age pension will be increased to $150 from $100.

Calgary Maverick No Issue-Dodger

By JOE WILL

CALGARY (CP) — Mayor Rod Sykes, who received mild chastisement Monday from a public inquiry into civic management, seldom gives his political opponents an inch and almost never side-steps an issue.

Since he swept into office two years ago he has traded gags with princes, stuck up for the common taxpayer and pushed his nose into everything he thought a mayor should know about.

He is as fast as a western gunfighter when it comes to pulling the trigger on a quip and his remarks are usually well-aimed.

The mayor, a slender, almost gangly six-footer, has found a politician is bound to incur a little wrath no matter how fast he talks.

If the city has any sacred cows, the mayor ran into one soon after he was elected when he raised the ire of the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede Association.

Under the previous administration of mayor Jack Leslie, the city agreed to spend $400,000 a year for 10 years to help the Stampede board expand its fair grounds into the older, somewhat deteriorating Victoria Park residential section.

SIDES WITH OPPONENTS

Mayor Sykes has stuck up for the residents who oppose the plan but has not fully abandoned the Stampede board. He has tried to find a suitable middle ground in the dispute, which is still unresolved.

Mr. Sykes, an accountant and economist by training, has also demonstrated a bent for savings—he ordered the mayor's black Cadillac to the auction block and now makes his appearances in a unmarked police cruiser.

He came to the city's top post from the vice-presidency of Marathon Realty, a member of the Canadian Pacific group of companies, but not with as much corporate loyalty as skeptics would imply.

When the Canadian Transport Commission held hearings on the railway's plans to cut transcontinental passenger service as an economy move, the mayor described the railway plan as "poor sort of joke" that was negative, foolish and fraught with illogical and irrational thinking.

He has been a bane to the city's police force sometimes and a friend to transient youth on the downtown mall.

The youths on the mall were complaining about harassment which the mayor made clear he was against.

He has supported the police force but said they did not need riot control equipment, such as that acquired in Vancouver. He found out they already had some of it.

Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow, in a report from the civic inquiry a few weeks ago, said the police commission which Mayor Sykes heads had interfered with the force. The judge recommended a decrease in the power of elected officials on the commission.

The mayor's relations with the news media have been stormy occasionally with complaints of misquoting and misinterpreting. At one point, recording of speeches was banned after the mayor said remarks were being taken out of context.

On two Sunday radio broadcasts he occasionally takes the opportunity to correct reports made during the previous week he feels were inaccurate.

When Prince Philip visited the city in 1969 and received the traditional Calgary white-hat welcome, he remarked that he already had one from an earlier visit.

A day later the mayor presented the prince with a set of long steer horns and remarked they were "what every travelling man needs."

The mayor, in his 42-years, has occasionally found his penchant for controversy getting him into trouble.

A city lawyer felt that remarks during a dispute over a shopping centre development were defamatory and the Alberta Supreme Court agreed.

The mayor now is appealing the $10,000 judgment to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Classes Closed By University

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — St. Francis Xavier University, faced with continuing picketing and boycott of classes in a student protest against disciplinary actions, suspended classes Monday for the remainder of the term which was scheduled to end Saturday.

Dr. Malcolm MacDonell, university president, said the 2,400 students would be required to write their final examinations at home and return them by mail to the university.

The writing of examinations would not be monitored.

Picketing at the university began April 6 to protest disciplinary action against three studens found guilty of inciting other students to violate a ban on women visiting men's residences.

Two fourth-year students were told to leave campus after writing final examinations. They would receive their degrees in absentia. A third-year student was ordered not to return to classes next year.

PICKETING STOPPED

The picketing ended Thursday to permit a university senate meeting to review the disciplinary action. The senate agreed to let the third-year student return to classes next term under disciplinary probation, but upheld action taken against the fourth-year students.

Students returned to the campus Sunday night following the Easter recess and voted 730-560 in favor of continuing the protest. About 375 students signed for picket duty Monday.

Classes remained open, but only about 200 students attended.

In announcing suspension of classes, Dr. MacDonell also said he had issued instructions that Nova Scotia Supreme Court injunctions be served on Jean DeLeskie, one of the strike leaders, and the student union, through its president Bob MacKinnon. The injunctions would bar further disruptive activity on campus, he said.

A spokesman for the student union said they would have no immediate comment on the university administration's actions.

Dr. MacDonell said he had accepted the recommendation of the joint faculty-student committee on studies that classes be suspended and examinations be mailed to students April 22. The examinations will be completed at home and returned to the university by May 4.

He said students would be graded on exams and other projects completed during the year, the finals and "other means of assessment by professors."

Professors will be available for consultation until April 16, one day prior to the university's scheduled closing date.

Dr. MacDonell said he felt the university community supported him in the decision to refuse to bow to the demands of dissident students.

"The university by its very nature is defenceless against behavior which is irrational, unreasonable and unacceptable in a democratic society," he said.

Romantic Siege Ends With Man's Surrender

From AP-Reuter

ANGOULEME, France (CP) — A 28-year-old Algerian who had been barricaded in a dilapidated farm house with his two-year-old daughter and four other persons surrendered his arms today and a short time later gave himself up to police.

Miloud Ben Miloud came out of the house with his former mistress and their child after holding off police for two nights. They were driven away in a police car.

Miloud, who lived in France before he was convicted of thefts and expelled to Algeria, had returned to France clandestinely with the apparent purpose of getting his former mistress, Jeanne Bucher, and their daughter to return to Algeria with him.

When Miss Bucher refused, Miloud kidnapped the child, Sophie, and went to an isolated farmhouse inhabited by a family of ragpickers who had been his friends when he lived in France.

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) — A nuclear weapon with an explosive force of five million tons of TNT will be exploded by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission below Alaska's Amchitka Island in early October.

Code-named Cannikin, the five-megaton test will be the largest underground atomic test ever conducted by the United States and will release almost five times the amount of explosive energy let loose by the largest previous underground U.S. test.

★ ★ ★

The AEC will not confirm the size or time of the test, declaring only that Cannikin will be "larger in yield" than the last Amchitka test called Milrow on Oct. 2, 1969, and will be held "in the fall of 1971."

"Cannikin is scheduled for October, because the Alaskan weather is most reliable then," an informed source said. "Its expected yield is very close to five megatons, so close you might as well call it five megatons."

While the AEC will not comment on the purpose of Cannikin, it is understood that it will be a test of an enlarged warhead for the spartan ABM missile. This is the long-range (more than 400 miles) version of the ABM, whose warhead is built to destroy incoming missiles in the upper reaches of the atmosphere or above the atmosphere.

★ ★ ★

Whatever its purpose, Cannikin is likely to arouse at least as much protest as the Milrow test kicked up almost two years ago.

Milrow as a 1.2-megaton test, described at the time it went off as a "suitability" test to see if still largest tests could be safely carried out under the tundra and hard rock of Amchitka island.

Besides Sen. Mike Gravel (D., Alaska) and antiwar and environmental groups, the countries of Canada and Japan denounced Milrow in strong terms. Japan called it a threat to Japanese fishing operations, and Canada expressed "concern ... about possible damage or injury for Canada resulting from these tests."

★ ★ ★

Milrow caused no damage, but Cannikin's five-megaton size is certain to revive fears about its triggering secondary earthquakes and submarine tidal waves, the two biggest concerns of the critics.

Sen. Gravel has already consulted with Alaska's Democratic Gov. William A. Egan about how to protest Cannikin, and two weeks ago the Canadian embassy in Washington made public a note it passed to the state dept. Feb. 19.

The note conveyed the "serious concern of the Canadian government about further underground testing on Amchitka," noting in particular that Amchitka tests, "take place in a region known to be prone to earth disturbances.

Scientists say that a five-megaton test will explode with a force equal to an earthquake of magnitude 7.0 on the Richter scale, which the AEC claims is not large enough to trigger a serious secondary earthquake.

One source said that AEC studies indicate it can safely test atomic weapons with yields of 20 to 25 megatons on the island. He said that it would take an explosion of greater than 25 megatons to trigger an earthquake of worrisome size.

★ ★ ★

Testing critics also worry about radiation contaminating underground water supplies or leaking into the Pacific Ocean, but an AEC source claims that tests over one megaton create so much heat that they cauterize the nuclear cavity and seal in the radiation.

While the largest U.S. underground tests have been in the 1.2 4-1 megaton range, the Soviet Union has conducted one test equal to five megatons and a second of six megatons. Both of these Soviet tests were on Novaya Zemlya Island, in the Arctic Ocean.

Pakistan Rebellion Crumbling

CHUADANGA, East Pakistan (AP) — Armed resistance in much of rebellious East Pakistan is crumbling fast before the swiftly advancing columns of President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan's army from West Pakistan.

The Pakistani army has been heavily reinforced from the country's western wing and is rapidly fanning out from Dacca in all directions.

For miles around the provincial capital the army is in firm control. Pakistan's green-and-white national flag flies from every second village hut.

EXPECT REPRISALS

The people are afraid of informers and terrified of reprisals should they be identified as supporters of Bangla Desh, the Bengali nation proclaimed by Sheik Mujib.

Thousands have fled the capital but Dacca nevertheless is slowly returning to something like normal.

"We are functioning at gunpoint, we have no alternative," said one Bengali civil servant.

Crossing the wide Ganges River unopposed, the Pakistani army has occupied the city of Pabna. Troops were reported swinging southwest toward the Bangla Desh stronghold of Kushtia.

Something close to panic seized its rag-tag band of defenders, and there was a wild rush to flee the town. A fleet of trucks, immobilized by lack of gasoline, was left to the advancing enemy. No effort was made to destroy them.

It was in Kushtia that some 200 Pakistan troops were massacred by Bangla Desh partisians, and the town fears bloody reprisal is inevitable.

Prices Climb 1.9% in Year

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The consumer price index rose four-tenths of an index point last month to 131.3, with higher prices for food, clothing and housing, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

In percentage terms the index last month was 1.9 per cent above a year earlier, barely under the two per cent annual increase considered by economists to be the maximum non-inflationary gain in Canada.

The index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, was 130.9 in February and 128.9 in March last year.

All major components of the index rose last month, except the tobacco and alcohol index.

Clothing prices recorded the largest advance. The bureau attributed the increase to a return to regular prices after winter sales.

FOOD PRICES RISE

While food prices rose by half of one per cent in the month, food prices were still below the level of a year ago.

The housing index rose only fractionally during the month, but it was 4.3 per cent higher than in March last year, the biggest increase of any of the group indexes over a 12-month period.

But the 1.9-per-cent gain indicates some acceleration in the price rise. In December, when the all-items index dropped, the annual rate was 1.5 per cent. It rose to 1.6 per cent in January and 1.7 per cent in February

The bureau said the purchasing power of the 1961 consumer dollar was 76 cents in March this year, compared with 78 cents in March last

YOUNG HOCKEY PLAYER KILLED BY PUCK

... below the helmet

TORONTO (CP) — A 16-year-old boy was killed Monday when his hockey helmet failed to protect him from a flying puck that hit the side of his head.

Claudio Romanin collapsed on the ice during a warmup for a casual game. He was pronounced dead at hospital.

Mida Boncali, a cousin of Romanin said:

"I was told the puck hit him on the side of the head a fraction below the helmet. An inch higher and he might have been all right."

The boy was just turning behind the goal when a slapshot fired by another boy caught him on the temple. Coroner Dr. A. E. Noble said he believed Romanin died of a massive brain hemorrhage.

Jobless Teachers' Group To Fight for More Work

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's unemployed teachers are organizing to fight for better job opportunities.

The Teachers Unemployment Association, a week-old organization started by Lower Mainland teachers, appeared at opening sessions of the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual convention here Monday to appeal for support.

The group, told it would have a chance to present its case at an unspecified time during the four-day convention, spent the day handing out leaflets which said the federation has never admited there is a teacher unemployment problem.

"It has done nothing to fight for future reduction instead of a future increase in teacher unemployment," the leaflet said.

Spokesman Beth Maris estimated the number of unemployed teachers in B.C at about 1,000.

LIST COMPILED

Last December the federation compiled a list of 388 jobless teachers after running newspaper advertisements which asked unemployed teachers to contact the federation. Of these, 181 said they were wiling to teach anywhere, and 288 had one or more degrees.

Canada Appoints China Ambassador

OTTAWA (CP)—Ralph E. Collins, an assistant external affairs undersecretary, today was named Canada's first ambassador to the People's Republic of China.

At the same time it was announced that Huang Hua, former Chinese ambassador to the United Arab Republic, will be mainland China's first ambassador to Ottawa.

The six months expired today.

Laotian Debacle Prompts Shuffle

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. officials are reassessing the Vietnamization program because of the disappointing South Vietnamese performance in the Laotian invasion and the current North Vietnamese offensive in the central highlands.

It was learned today the U.S. 7th Air Force is planning a complete reorganization and consolidation of its squadrons in South Vietnam in an effort to become more proficient in providing cover for withdrawing American forces.

During withdrawal of 100,000 more troops between May 1 and Dec. 1, reduction of the 40,500 air force personnel will likely be kept to a minimum, sources said, with perhaps only one air wing pulled out.

Both the Laotian operation and the current North Vietnamese offensive in the central highlands point up one major weakness of Vietnamization. This is the South Vietnamese dependency on American air power. The South Vietnamese air force does not have enough planes or firepower yet to do the job alone, U.S. officials say.

Meets Cross

LONDON (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec had what sides called a "very warm" meeting today with James Cross, the first time the two men have gotten together since the British official was released from captivity last December by Front de Liberation du Quebec kidnappers in Montreal.

India Ships on Guard Near Colombo Harbor

COLOMBO (CP) — At least four Indian warships lay outside Colombo harbor today as the Ceylonese began observance of the Buddhist new year and captured documents told of plans by the Che Guevarist rebels to attack Colombo.

A stringent nightly curfew is in effect following more than a week of violence between the insurgents estimated to number 80,000 and 25,000 troops and police.

Informed sources said military authorities had seized documents of the Marxist rebels outlining plans for an attack today or Wednesday on Colombo. The documents were said to be several days old, however, and it was not known whether the rebels would still come out from hiding for the planned assault.

A fleet of armed helicopters took off from Colombo today to root out insurgents in jungle areas.

An armed forces spokesman claimed that large bands of terrorists were deserting and abandoning weapons and uniforms in various parts of the island.

Y' gotta admire them nuclear testers — they sure are nervy gamblers.

CALGARY CIVIC PROBE BLAMES MAYOR

Officials 'Embarrass' City Police

CALGARY (CP) — Civic officials were accused of embarrassing and making fools of city police Monday in the report of a public inquiry into municipal affairs.

Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow said Mayor Rod Sykes was at fault for disharmony and a lack of communication with police over law enforcement policies to be used at a rock festival last summer.

The disagreement led to the embarrassment of police who could not take action against open abuse of drug and liquor laws.

The report said Ald. John Kushner made fools of the police when he entered a float in the Calgary Stampede last year concerning allegations against him for unlawfully removing an apple tree from city property.

Ald. Kushner, who had the tree dug up with city equipment and moved under police escort, acted "to say the least, indiscreet," said Mr. Justice Morrow.

SON'S YARD

The tree had been placed in the yard of the alderman's son.

The Northwest Territories justice said he was satisfied project manager Ed Burgoyne of the housing and urban renewal department did not give Ald. Kushner permission to remove the tree, but that Ald. Kushner believed he had permission and acted innocently.

SYKES
mayor blamed

Profile of Sykes —See Page 35

The float in the Stampede parade had carried a tree — but not the one removed from an urban renewal area. The presence of the float drew a chuckle from those Calgarians who regarded the incident as comical.

In discussing thefts from the city, Mr. Justice Morrow said there was a "general apathy about security matters and about improving or tightening them."

IMPROVED SECURITY

In his 156-page report, Mr. Justice Morrow recommended improved security and surveillance in areas where money was handled.

The inquiry, which was prompted after two men were convicted last year of theft from the Calgary transit system, was requested by Mayor Sykes to bring out the truth and eliminate false rumors concerning theft from the city.

Community Housing Plan

Anyone who wants to participate in a community housing project is invited to attend a meeting on the subject sponsored by the Victoria Low Income Group on April 19.

Low Income Group president Walter Olszewski says he has been told financing for a project consisting of 50 or 100 townhouses could be made available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

But before a start is made the Low Income Group wants to consult with people who might live in the project to find out what kind of features they would like, what they feel about community living and how much say they would like in the running of the project.

"We don't want another Rose-Blanshard," Olszewski said.

"We want to involve the people in the community so that this project won't be a place where you stick all the poor people, like in Rose-Blanshard."

Architects will attend the April 19 meeting which will be held in the basement of St. Andrew's Cathedral at Blanshard and View.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG — Agressive buying by local and commission houses pushed rapeseed futures to higher lvels today on the Winnipeg grain exchange on a strong volume of trading.

Rapeseed appeared to have some short covering in both the May and April futures. Flax was steady and oats and barley were limited mostly to domestic shipper buying. rye had heavy commission house buying and moved to higher price levels.

In Chicago, old-crop soybeans advanced three cents a bushel early on the board of trade today, but gave up a good part of the move under late profit-taking.

Soybeans opened as much as a cent higher and moved slowly to about three cents above previous closes after mid-session. Soy oil gained about 15 points and meal about 35 points.

At the close, soybeans were up about 2, May 2.92; corn down 1, May 1.48⅝; wheat down 1, May 1.56½, and oats mixed, May 70⅛.

Unique Business Geared To Needs of Old, Infirm

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two registered nurses and a chartered accountant have started a business aimed at relieving some of the anxiety associated with elderly or infirm people living alone.

The company, called Telecheck Ltd., provides daily telephone calls to the people living alone, to ensure that they are eating regularly and are in good health and circumstances.

"Older people tend not to eat," said William Campbell. "Malnutrition does develop. Sometimes they can go for whole days on a cup of tea or coffee."

To counter such neglect, Telecheck Ltd. calls at a prearranged hour and also sends nurses on house calls in times of distress.

The firm has operated only in a limited way to date and full-scale business is to begin May 1.

Campbell, owner with his wife and another nurse, Barbara Sudermann, said many people living alone need some form of reassurance.

With caretakers prohibited from entering apartments without permission of the occupant, a solitary resident may be in trouble and go unnoticed.

MANY WORK PART-TIME

Telecheck Ltd. charges $13.75 a month for the basic phone calls plus $6.50 for each house call, made by a nurse at her discretion. The company has 65 registered employees, most of them part-time.

When a new subscriber signs up, a representative of the firm makes a personal visit for a chat, so the client knows who is talking to him on the telephone later.

If a call isn't answered promptly, it is repeated in a matter of minutes and if there is still no answer, a house call is made. House calls also are made if the caller feels the client isn't getting proper meals.

The company, which operates out of the Campbell's southwest Winnipeg home, also provides temporary companions for ailing people who require 24-hour attention, enabling their regular companions to take a break.

The Campbells, with four young children, and Mrs. Sudermann, a doctor's wife with five youngsters, got the idea for the business from a mazagine article about a similar venture in New York City.

HAD MANY INQUIRIES

Campbell said that since the business was begun in mid-March, he has had inquiries from as far away as Los Angeles and he is thinking of expanding on a franchise basis.

Mrs. Sudermann said the business "isn't strictly for older people." Assistance also is provided to families with mentally retarded or chronically ill children who need trained help.

The firm sends people with experience in hospital or volunteer work to act as companions for the sick youngster, relieving relatives to look after other matters.

Campbell said the telephone-check service means a middle-aged person who has to move away from the city and leave a parent behind, can be sure of the parent's welfare.

Not all the telephone clients are old people. Some are women living alone who need a familiar voice to help them cope with life in a city they regard as uncaring.

Campbell said that while callers are sympathetic to the interests of clients, they don't attempt to play "substitute analyst" or make improper instrusions into the client's private life.

Census Day In Britain April 25

LONDON (AP) — Britain is going ahead with its decennial census despite charges that it is a gross invasion of privacy and the beginning of the "computerized data bank society."

On Census Day, April 25, more than 100,000 enumerators will be out to list people and learn how many cars each household has, whether it has a kitchen sink, a bath or shower and many other bits of information.

Registrar-General Michael Reed hopes the census will provide the most revealing look since census-taking began here in 1801.

"We have to find out what the country is truly like," a spokesman for the registrar-general said. "There is a tendency for people to assume that everyone's environment is the same as their own."

The forms to be filled out by householders will be filed away in the public record office for 100 years. No names will be included in the computer data.

Burrard

Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd. reports net income for 1970 of $1 million or $1.19 a share, compared with $882,809 or 88 cents, in 1969.

The annual report shows retained earnings increased to $10.4 million from $9.39 million.

Sales were $40 million compared with $43.4 million in 1969.

Twelve new vessels were delivered by the company during 1970, including a tanker and two log barges. A newsprint barge was delivered last month.

Stannex

Stannex Minerals Ltd. reports efforts to obtain senior financing for its Revelstoke property should result in a suitable deal as the financial climate improves and metal prices rise.

Numerous contacts have been made with a view to financing the property to production, and meanwhile adequate funds are available for other 1971 projects.

Pay Raise In Works For Queen

LONDON (AP) — The Queen may get an increase in her $1.14 million annual allowance from the government.

In 1969, Prince Philip told a United States television interviewer the royal finances were in the red, but nothing was done about remedying the situation

Sunday, government sources said Prime Minister Heath soon will set in motion machinery to give the Queen her first raise in 19 years.

Heath told the House of Commons six weeks ago the Queen's funds, "although not inexhaustible, will suffice for some time yet."

Quiet discussions involving government and royal representatives have been held since then. Sources said they now expect the subject to be revived in Parliament soon after the Easter recess.

The Queen, among the world's wealthiest women, gets £200,000 ($480,000) tax-free a year from her private estates. Her chief income is the $1.14 million a year in government allowances in lieu of crown-land revenue surrendered to the state by the Royal Family in the 17th century.

REDUCED BY HALF

While the expense of maintaining a royal style of living has soared since Elizabeth became queen in 1952, her government allowances have not changed. Inflation has cut their real value by 50 per cent.

Classes Closed By University

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — St. Francis Xavier University, faced with continuing picketing and boycott of classes in a student protest against disciplinary actions, suspended classes Monday for the remainder of the term which was scheduled to end Saturday.

Dr. Malcolm MacDonell, university president, said the 2,400 students would be required to write their final examinations at home and return them by mail to the university.

The writing of examinations would not be monitored.

Picketing at the university began April 6 to protest disciplinary action against three students found guilty of inciting other students to violate a ban on women visiting men's residences.

Two fourth-year students were told to leave campus after writing final examinations. They would receive their degrees in absentia. A third-year student was ordered not to return to classes next year.

PICKETING STOPPED

The picketing ended Thursday to permit a university senate meeting to review the disciplinary action. The senate agreed to let the third-year student return to classes next term under disciplinary probation, but upheld action taken against the fourth-year students.

Students returned to the campus Sunday night following the Easter recess and voted 730-560 in favor of continuing the protest. About 375 students signed for picket duty Monday.

Classes remained open, but only about 200 students attended.

In announcing suspension of classes, Dr. MacDonell also said he had issued instructions that Nova Scotia Supreme Court injunctions be served on Jean DeLeskie, one of the strike leaders, and the student union, through its president Bob MacKinnon. The injunctions would bar further disruptive activity on campus, he said.

A spokesman for the student union said they would have no immediate comment on the university administration's actions.

ACCEPTS RECOMMENDATION

Dr. MacDonell said he had accepted the recommendation of the joint faculty-student committee on studies that classes be suspended and examinations be mailed to students April 22. The examinations will be completed at home and returned to the university by May 4.

He said students would be graded on exams and other projects completed during the year, the finals and "other means of assessment by professors."

Professors will be available for consultation until April 16, one day prior to the university's scheduled closing date.

Dr. MacDonell said he felt the university community supported him in the decision to refuse to bow to the demands of dissident students.

"The university by its very nature is defenceless against behavior which is irrational, unreasonable and unacceptable in a democratic society," he said.

Romantic Siege Ends With Man's Surrender

From AP-Reuter

ANGOULEME, France (CP) — A 28-year-old Algerian who had been barricaded in a dilapidated farm house with his two-year-old daughter and four other persons surrendered his arms today and a short time later gave himself up to police.

Miloud Ben Miloud came out of the house with his former mistress and their child after holding off police for two nights. They were driven away in a police car.

Miloud, who lived in France before he was convicted of thefts and expelled to Algeria, had returned to France clandestinely with the apparent purpose of getting his former mistress, Jeanne Bucher, and their daughter to return to Algeria with him.

When Miss Bucher refused, Miloud kidnapped the child, Sophie, and went to an isolated farmhouse inhabited by a family of ragpickers who had been his friends when he lived in France.

Officials Mystified By Delay in U.K. Mail

First-class mail from the United Kingdom is taking up to three times as long as normal to reach Victoria homes.

Air mail letters normally take three days, but in the last month this has lengthened to anywhere from seven to 10 days.

Ken Stofer, information officer at the Victoria Post Office, said today he doesn't know the reason for the delays. He said internal post office mail has been taking seven to eight days to reach Victoria.

He did say, however, that U.K. first-class mail comes by air to Vancouver for relay to Victoria and there is no delay in British Columbia.

The postal strike in the U.K. ended more than a month ago. Stofer said a backlog from the strike caused initial delays but he didn't think this could be the reason now.

Huge Amchitka N-Blast Set

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) — A nuclear weapon with an explosive force of five million tons of TNT will be exploded by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission below Alaska's Amchitka Island in early October.

Code-named Cannikin, the five-megaton test will be the largest underground atomic test ever conducted by the United States and will release almost five times the amount of explosive energy let loose by the largest previous underground U.S. test.

★ ★ ★

The AEC will not confirm the size or time of the test, declaring only that Cannikin will be "larger in yield" than the last Amchitka test called Milrow on Oct. 2, 1969, and will be held "in the fall of 1971."

"Cannikin is scheduled for October, because the Alaskan weather is most reliable then," an informed source said. "Its expected yield is very close to five megatons, so close you might as well call it five megatons."

While the AEC will not comment on the purpose of Cannikin, it is understood that it will be a test of an enlarged warhead for the spartan ABM missile. This is the long-range (more than 400 miles) version of the ABM, whose warhead is built to destroy incoming missiles in the upper reaches of the atmosphere or above the atmosphere.

★ ★ ★

Whatever its purpose, Cannikin is likely to arouse at least as much protest as the Milrow test kicked up almost two years ago.

Milrow as a 1.2-megaton test, described at the time it went off as a "suitability" test to see if still largest tests could be safely carried out under the tundra and hard rock of Amchitka island.

Besides Sen. Mike Gravel (D., Alaska) and antiwar and environmental groups, the countries of Canada and Japan denounced Milrow in strong terms. Japan called it a threat to Japanese fishing operations, and Canada expressed "concern . . . about possible damage or injury for Canada resulting from these tests."

★ ★ ★

Milrow caused no damage, but Cannikin's five-megaton size is certain to revive fears about its triggering secondary earthquakes and submarine tidal waves, the two biggest concerns of the critics.

Sen. Gravel has already consulted with Alaska's Democratic Gov. William A. Egan about how to protest Cannikin, and two weeks ago the Canadian embassy in Washington made public a note it passed to the state department Feb. 19.

The note conveyed the "serious concern of the Canadian government about further underground testing on Amchitka," noting in particular that Amchitka tests, "take place in a region known to be prone to earth disturbances."

Scientists say that a five-megaton test will explode with a force equal to an earthquake of magnitude 7.0 on the Richter scale, which the AEC claims is not large enough to trigger a serious secondary earthquake.

One source said that AEC studies indicate it can safely test atomic weapons with yields of 20 to 25 megatons on the island. He said that it would take an explosion of greater than 25 megatons to trigger an earthquake of worrisome size.

★ ★ ★

Testing critics also worry about radiation contaminating underground water supplies or leaking into the Pacific Ocean, but an AEC source claims that tests over one megaton create so much heat that they cauterize the nuclear cavity and seal in the radiation.

While the largest U.S. underground tests have been in the 1.2 4-1 megaton range, the Soviet Union has conducted one test equal to five megatons and a second of six megatons. Both of these Soviet tests were on Novaya Zemlya Island, in the Arctic Ocean.

Pakistan Rebellion Crumbling

CHUADANGA, East Pakistan (AP) — Armed resistance in much of rebellious East Pakistan is crumbling fast before the swiftly advancing columns of President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan's army from West Pakistan.

The Pakistani army has been heavily reinforced from the country's western wing and is rapidly fanning out from Dacca in all directions.

For miles around the provincial capital the army is in firm control. Pakistan's green-and white national flag flies from every second village hut.

EXPECT REPRISALS

The people are afraid of informers and terrified of reprisals should they be identified as supporters of Bangla Desh, the Bengali nation proclaimed by Sheik Mujib.

Thousands have fled the capital but Dacca nevertheless is slowly returning to something like normal.

"We are functioning at gunpoint, we have no alternative," said one Bengali civil servant.

Crossing the wide Ganges River unopposed, the Pakistani army has occupied the city of Pabna. Troops were reported swinging southwest toward the Bangla Desh stronghold of Kushtia.

Something close to panic seized its rag-tag band of defenders, and there was a wild rush to flee the town. A fleet of trucks, immobilized by lack of gasoline, was left to the advancing enemy. No effort was made to destroy them.

It was in Kushtia that some 200 Pakistan troops were massacred by Bangla Desh partisians, and the town fears bloody reprisal is inevitable.

Prices Climb 1.9% in Year

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The consumer price index rose four-tenths of an index point last month to 131.3, with higher prices for food, clothing and housing, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

In percentage terms the index last month was 1.9 per cent above a year earlier, barely under the two per cent annual increase considered by economists to be the maximum non-inflationary gain in Canada.

The index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, was 130.9 in February and 128.9 in March last year.

All major components of the index rose last month, except the tobacco and alcohol index.

Clothing prices recorded the largest advance. The bureau attributed the increase to a return to regular prices after winter sales.

FOOD PRICES RISE

While food prices rose by half of one per cent in the month, food prices were still below the level of a year ago.

The housing index rose only fractionally during the month, but it was 4.3 per cent higher than in March last year, the biggest increase of any of the group indexes over a 12-month period.

But the 1.9-per-cent gain indicates some acceleration in the price rise. In December, when the all-items index dropped, the annual rate was 1.5 per cent. It rose to 1.6 per cent in January and 1.7 per cent in February

The bureau said the purchasing power of the 1961 consumer dollar was 76 cents in March this year, compared with 78 cents in March last

YOUNG HOCKEY PLAYER KILLED BY PUCK

. . . below the helmet

TORONTO (CP) — A 16-year-old boy was killed Monday when his hockey helmet failed to protect him from a flying puck that hit the side of his head.

Claudio Romanin collapsed on the ice during a warmup for a casual game. He was pronounced dead at hospital.

Mida Roncali, a cousin of Romanin said:

"I was told the puck hit him on the side of the head a fraction below the helmet. An inch higher and he might have been all right."

The boy was just turning behind the goal when a slapshot fired by another boy caught him on the temple. Coroner Dr. A. E. Noble said he believed Romanin died of a massive brain hemorrhage.

Jobless Teachers' Group To Fight for More Work

VANCOUVER (CP) British Columbia's unemployed teachers are organizing to fight for better job opportunities.

The Teachers Unemployment Association, a week-old organization started by Lower Mainland teachers, appeared at opening sessions of the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual convention here Monday to appeal for support.

The group, told it would have a chance to present its case at an unspecified time during the four-day convention, spent the day handing out leaflets which said the federation has never admitted there is a teacher unemployment problem.

"It has done nothing to fight for future reduction instead of a future increase in teacher unemployment," the leaflet said.

Spokesman Beth Maris estimated the number of unemployed teachers in B.C at about 1,000.

LIST COMPILED

Last December the federation compiled a list of 388 jobless teachers after running newspaper advertisements which asked unemployed teachers to contact the federation. Of these, 181 said they were willing to teach anywhere, and 288 had one or more degrees.

Canada Appoints China Ambassador

OTTAWA (CP)—Ralph E. Collins, an assistant external affairs undersecretary, today was named Canada's first ambassador to the People's Republic of China.

At the same time it was announced that Huang Hua, former Chinese ambassador to the United Arab Republic, will be mainland China's first ambassador to Ottawa.

Both postings had been predicted earlier.

Laotian Debacle Prompts Shuffle

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. officials are reassessing the Vietnamization program because of the disappointing South Vietnamese performance in the Laotian invasion and the current North Vietnamese offensive in the central highlands.

It was learned today the U.S. 7th Air Force is planning a complete reorganization and consolidation of its squadrons in South Vietnam in an effort to become more proficient in providing cover for withdrawing American forces.

During withdrawal of 100,000 more troops between May 1 and Dec. 1, reduction of the 40,500 air force personnel will likely be kept to a minimum, sources said, with perhaps only one air wing pulled out.

India Ships on Guard Near Colombo Harbor

COLOMBO (CP) — At least four Indian warships lay outside Colombo harbor today as the Ceylonese began observance of the Buddhist new year and captured documents told of plans by the Che Guevarist rebels to attack Colombo.

A stringent nightly curfew is in effect following more than a week of violence between the insurgents estimated to number 80,000 and 25,000 troops and police.

Informed sources said military authorities had seized documents of the Marxist rebels outlining plans for an attack today or Wednesday on Colombo. The documents were said to be several days old, however, and it was not known whether the rebels would still come out from hiding for the planned assault.

A fleet of armed helicopters took off from Colombo today to root out insurgents in jungle areas.

An armed forces spokesman claimed that large bands of terrorists were deserting and abandoning weapons and uniforms in various parts of the island.

CALGARY CIVIC PROBE BLAMES MAYOR

Officials 'Embarrass' City Police

CALGARY (CP) — Civic officials were accused of embarrassing and making fools of city police Monday in the report of a public inquiry into municipal affairs.

Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow said Mayor Rod Sykes was at fault for disharmony and a lack of communication with police over law enforcement policies to be used at a rock festival last summer.

The disagreement led to the embarrassment of police who could not take action against open abuse of drug and liquor laws.

The report said Ald. John Kushner made fools of the police when he entered a float in the Calgary Stampede last year concerning allegations against him for unlawfully removing an apple tree from city property.

Ald. Kushner, who had the tree dug up with city equipment and moved under police escort, acted "to say the least, indiscreet," said Mr. Justice Morrow.

SON'S YARD

The tree had been placed in the yard of the alderman's son.

The Northwest Territories justice said he was satisfied project manager Ed Burgoyne of the housing and urban renewal department did not give Ald. Kushner permission to remove the tree, but that Ald. Kushner believed he had permission and acted innocently.

The float in the Stampede parade had carried a tree — but not the one removed from an urban renewal area. The presence of the float drew a chuckle from those Calgarians who regarded the incident as comical.

SYKES

Profile of Sykes —See Page 35

In discussing thefts from the city, Mr. Justice Morrow said there was a "general apathy about security matters and about improving or tightening them."

IMPROVED SECURITY

In his 156-page report, Mr. Justice Morrow recommended improved security and surveillance in areas where money was handled.

The inquiry, which was prompted after two men were convicted last year of theft from the Calgary transit system, was requested by Mayor Sykes to bring out the truth and eliminate false rumors concerning theft from the city.
